

CONTRIBUTORS

Michael F. Bird (Ph.D., Queensland) is Lecturer in Systematic Theology at the Bible College of Queensland in Brisbane, Australia. His interests include Christian origins and the theological interpretation of Scripture. He is the author of several books including The Saving Righteousness of God (Paternoster, 2007) and Are You the One Who is to Come? (Baker, 2009).

Jennifer G. Bird (Ph.D., Vanderbilt) is Assistant Professor of Biblical Studies at Greensboro College in Greensboro, North Carolina, U.S.A. Her research addresses the effects of empire and gender on the early Christian movement and its writings. Her first monograph is Abuse, Power and Fearful Obedience: Reconsidering 1 Peter's Commands to Wives (T. & T. Clark, forthcoming).

Tomas Bokedal (Th.D., Lund) is lecturer in New Testament at King's College, University of Aberdeen, U.K. His research interests include Christian origins and the relation of Scripture and theology. He is the author of The Scriptures and the Lord: Formation and Significance of the Christian Biblical Canon (Lund University Press, 2005).

David W. Congdon is a Ph.D. student in systematic theology at Princeton Theological Seminary in Princeton, NJ. His research focuses on the issues of Christology, theological ontology, and hermeneutics, especially as they intersect in the work of Karl Barth and Rudolf Bultmann.

Jamie A. Grant (Ph.D., Gloucestershire) is Vice-Principal and Tutor in Biblical Studies at the Highland Theological College in Dingwall, U.K. His main research interests revolve around the Psalms, OT wisdom literature, and hermeneutics. Jamie has written or edited several books, including Transforming the World? The Gospel and Social Responsibility (Apollos, 2009).

James M. Hamilton Jr. (Ph.D., Southern Seminary) serves as Associate Professor of Biblical Theology at Southern Seminary and as Preaching Pastor at Kenwood Baptist Church in Louisville, Kentucky, U.S.A. He previously taught at Southwestern Seminary's campus in Houston, Texas, U.S.A. He is the author God's Indwelling Presence (B&H Publishing, 2006).

Karen H. Jobes (Ph.D., Westminster Seminary, Philadelphia) is the Gerald F. Hawthorne Professor of New Testament Greek and Exegesis at Wheaton College and Graduate School in Wheaton, Illinois, U.S.A. Author of several books and numerous journal articles, she held a tenured faculty position at Westmont College in Santa Barbara, California, before coming to Wheaton in 2005.

George Kalantzis (Ph.D., Northwestern) teaches theology at Wheaton College in Wheaton, Illinois, U.S.A., where he also directs The Wheaton Center for Early Christian Studies. His most recent books include the co-edited The Sovereignty of God Debate (Cascade, 2008) and Studies on Patristic Texts and Archaeology (Mellen, 2009).

Thorsten Moritz (Ph.D., King's College London) is Professor of Hermeneutics and New Testament at Bethel Seminary in St. Paul, Minnesota, U.S.A., and a Ph.D. Advisor for the London School of Theology. He is the author of A Profound Mystery (Brill, 1996), and he is currently writing the Two Horizons Commentary volume on Mark (Eerdmans).

Michael W. Pahl (Ph.D., Birmingham) is Pastor at Lendrum Mennonite Brethren Church in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. He has taught biblical studies and theology for several years in college and seminary settings in Canada and the U.K., and he is the author of Discerning the 'Word of the Lord' (T. & T. Clark, 2009).

Brant Pitre (Ph.D., Notre Dame) is Professor of Sacred Scripture at Notre Dame Seminary, New Orleans. His research interests focus on the historical Jesus, eschatology, and Second Temple Judaism, as well as the theological interpretation of Scripture. Pitre is the author of Jesus, the Tribulation, and the End of the Exile (Mohr Siebeck; Baker Academic, 2005).

John C. Poirier (D.H.L., Jewish Theological Seminary) is Chair of Biblical Studies at Kingswell Theological Seminary in Middletown, Ohio. He has published extensively in the areas of biblical studies, ancient Judaism, early church history, biblical theology, and hermeneutics. Most recently, he is the author of "'Theological Interpretation' and its Contradistinctions" (Tyndale Bulletin, forthcoming).

Robert Shillaker (Ph.D., Open University) is Lecturer in Systematic Theology at the Highland Theological College in Dingwall, U.K. His research interests include pneumatology and the doctrine of God.

