

TABLE OF CONTENTS

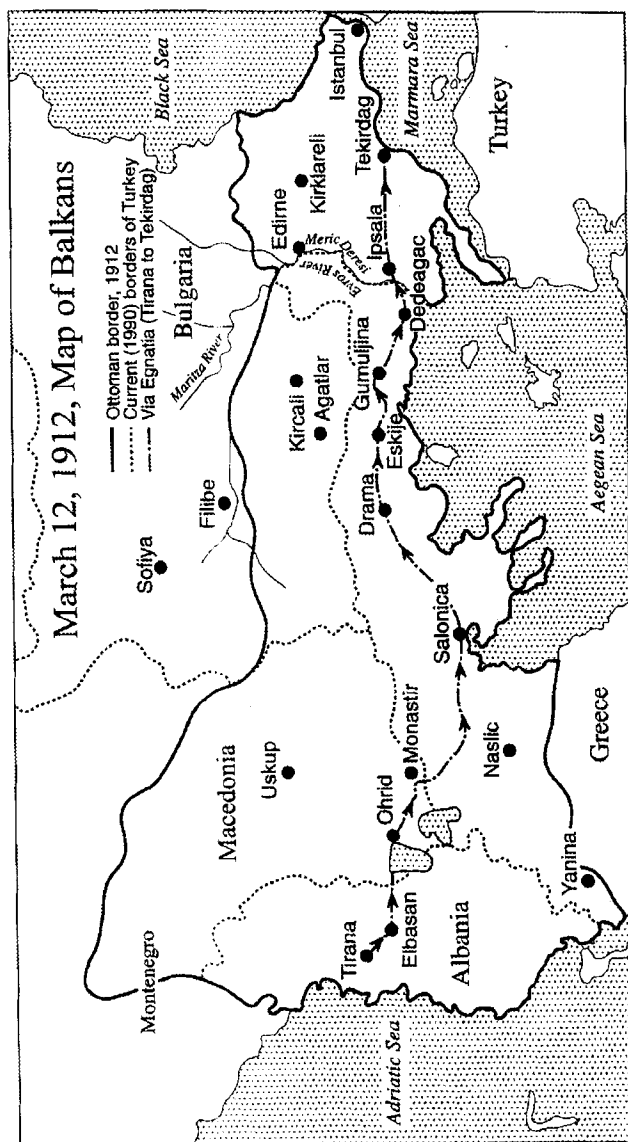

1. Shadow of a Sultan's Gift	1
2. Ottoman Retreat from the Balkans	13
3. Aftermath of Population Exchanges	33
4. Desertion and Death	47
5. Setting the Course	65
6. Bulgarian Fountain-head	79
7. Farewell to Turkey	91
8. Westward on the Orient Express: Bulgarian Collaboration with Germany	97
9. Vienna in 1943	109
10. German Intrigue and Turkish Neutrality	121
11. Tribute to a Turkish Spahi	135
12. Love Amidst the Bombings	149
13. Rest and Recreation with the Wehrmacht	173
14. War's Uncounted Toll	187
15. Vienna Woods in War Time	201
16. The Mountains Beckon	211
17. Gestapo Visited	221
18. Negotiated Departure	229
19. Pursuit of a Dream	239
References	249

ILLUSTRATIONS

1. Three generation family tree identifying Turkish, Greek and Bulgarian origins.	IV
2. Map of the route taken in September 1912 from Tirana, Albania to Tekirdağ, Turkey. It also shows the paternal lands of Agatlar, Bulgaria and maternal lands of Naslic, (Lapsista), Greece.	VIII

PHOTOGRAPHS

1. Aydın's mother, Münevver, in Tirana, Albania in 1911 when she was 11 years old.	32
2. Aydın's father, Şükrü, in front of Roman ruins near Phillippopolus, Bulgaria in 1926.	78
3. Front view of the University of Vienna as it appeared in 1992.	120
4. Statue of a Turkish Spahi at Heiden Schuss in Vienna.	134
5. Hotel Metropole in Vienna. The Gestapo Headquarters from 1938 until 1945. A fire destroyed the building in 1955.	148
6. Authors in 1948.	172

Map of the route taken in September 1912 from Tirana, Albania to Tekirdag, Turkey. It also shows the paternal lands of Agatlar, Bulgaria and maternal land of Naslic, (Lapsista), Greece.

