

Acknowledgments

I would like to thank the following individuals and institutions whose assistance made the completion of this dissertation possible. The Fulbright Commission and the American Research Institute in Turkey, as well as the Turkish Ministry of Education, provided financial assistance that made it possible for me to spend the academic year of 1975-76 in Turkey.

Special appreciation goes to Professor A. Bodrogligeti, who gave me enthusiastic and unwavering support, and to Professor G. Gugelberger without whom I might have been attracted to other topics of study. Also, I would like to thank the late Professor Haldun Taner, then a member of the faculty of Istanbul University and the playwright whose stage successes prompted Professor Metin And's, and later my own, special interest in the connection of Bertolt Brecht with Turkish theater. He gave generously of his time in order to provide information available from no other source and shared insights that were assimilated into my thinking at every step. The members of the Theater Research Institute of Ankara University, Professors Melahat Özgü, Özdemir Nutku, Sevda Şener, Metin And, Nurhan Karadağ, and Sevinç Sokollu were particularly helpful and made their resources entirely available to me, even when inconvenient. Professor Özdemir Nutku shared his personal bibliographic resources and gave generously of his time for many long discussions of various aspects of this study. His guidance affected the direction of my thinking and is present even when not directly acknowledged. Other institutions that gave important assistance were the Theater Section of the Turkish Radio and Television Authority (TRT), the National Theater in Ankara, the Istanbul Municipal Library, and the National Library in Istanbul as well as the Bosphorus University Library at Bebek. The librarians of the Istanbul Municipal Theater, Gülsüm Şeref and Özen Çetin, provided valuable assistance in locating documents (and sometimes individuals); many other employees of the Municipal Theater offered help at crucial stages of my research, such as Aysin Candan, Güngör Dilmen, Zihni Küçümen, Deniz Uyguner, and Sermet Erkin, who provided me with documents unavailable elsewhere for any price. Arslan Kaynardağ and Gani Yener of Elif Bookstore, as well as their neighbor, M. İsmail Açı, found for me books that I would not otherwise have been able to obtain.

Members of private theater groups, such as the Ankara Sanat Tiyatrosu, the Devrimci Ankara Sanat Tiyatrosu, Dostlar Tiyatrosu, and Birlik Tiyatrosu were especially generous with their time for interviews. Professor Oya Basak at Bogaziçi [Bosphorus] University and Professor Hamza Zülfikar of Ankara University gave encouragement and assisted in making contacts. Osman Karaca of the ONK Copyright Agency provided the texts of many important and unpublished plays not otherwise available. Jack Richotte and his staff at the United States Information Service in Istanbul and Ankara solved some technical problems and gave help in making photocopies of documents. Dr. Werner Bartsch of the German Cultural Center in Ankara advised on several questions, providing information that proved quite useful.

Lastly, I would like to acknowledge the many occasions when Hüsni Ersoy and his staff at the Fulbright Commission in Ankara solved some difficult problems in bureaucracy as well as domestic finance that could have otherwise jeopardized the completion of my research. Also, Heath Lowry and Peter Kuniholm, directors of the Istanbul and Ankara branches of the American Research Institute in Turkey, performed similar work. Their efficient management enabled me to use ARIT libraries for some effective, quiet reflection. Their supervisors, Professors Hans Güterbock and Frank Taschau, went beyond the call of duty to make certain that no problem prevented the progress of research.

The following persons merit special thank for their time and patience with interview questions that must have seemed obvious to them in the beginning, and to me only at the end:

Mustafa Gürsoy at Politika newspaper assisted in making contacts with individuals who provided interviews and Tanju Cılızoğlu of Tiyatro 76 magazine provided information that was frequently helpful in locating them. Gérard Woldtvedt typed the final draft with a dedication and attention to detail that was as appreciated as it was uncommon.
