

Contents

Translator's Note	ix
INTRODUCTION: Truth and Literature	1
Why the Novel Matters	1
Books of Life	3
Games of Truth	5
Literature and Reality	9
What Is the Novel?	13
ONE: A Theory of Narrative	20
People and Leaves	20
Mimesis and Concept	25
The Hidden Contents of Mimesis	31
The Confines of Mimesis	33
Between Nothingness and Ideas: The Mimetic Discontinuity	37
Stories	40
Narrative and Existential Analytics	47
Narrators	51
Levels of Reality	54
Being in the World	57

TWO: The Origin of the Novel	60
Historical Semantics	60
The Question of Origins	64
The First Corpus	67
Symbolic Thresholds: 1550	75
Symbolic Thresholds: 1670	79
The Territory of the Romance	85
The Territory of the Novel	87
The Rise of the Novel	92
THREE: The Novel and the Literature of the Ancien Régime	95
The Dialectic of Continuity and Change	95
A Cohesive Epoch	96
Classicism and the Separation of Styles	100
Aesthetic Platonism	111
Moralism and Allegory	121
Moralistic Apparatuses, Poetic Justice, Exemplary Heroes	125
The Legitimization of the Romance	131
The Legitimization of the Novel	134
FOUR: The Book of Particular Life	138
The Romance and Private Aims	138
Suspense, Entrelacement , and the Romanesque	143
The History of Private Lives	148
A Discursive Gap	150
The Pathos of Proximity	156
The Interesting	159
The Novel's Readership	161
Particular Life	163
National Differences: France and England	176
FIVE: The Birth of the Modern Novel	180
Freedom from the Rules of Style	181
Freedom from Allegory and Morality	185
Moralism, Empathy, and Observation	189
A New Conceptual Ether	200
The Weight of Novels	206

The Expansion of the Narratable World	214
The Middle Station of Life	217
The Serious Mimesis of Everyday Life	220
The World of Prose	224
Center and Periphery	226
Narrative Democracy	228
SIX: The Nineteenth-Century Paradigm	230
Abstractions	230
Realisms	232
The Frameworks of the Nineteenth-Century Paradigm	236
The Figurative Novel and Its Theatrical Model	241
The Discovery of the Environment	251
Dependent Individuals	254
The Melodramatic Model	257
The Significance of the Melodramatic Novel	261
The Romance in the Novel , Special Characters	266
The Novel of Personal Destinies	267
A Map of the Nineteenth-Century Paradigm	270
SEVEN: The Transition to Modernism	272
The Second Phase of Nineteenth-Century Realism	272
Realism without Melodrama	274
Historical Stations	287
New Narrators	290
New Plots	297
New Characters	301
Three Turning Points	314
Short Stories and Epiphanies	319
Worlds Apart	323
The Modern Forms of the Romance	328
The Sense of a Transformation	330
EIGHT: On Contemporary Fiction	333
After Modernism	333
The Decline of the New	334
A Multiple Archipelago	337

CONCLUSION: A Theory of the Novel	343
The Genre of Particularity	343
Relativism and Perspectivism	346
An Analytics of Existence	350
Discursive Transformations	352
The Design of This Book	360
On the Present State of Things	366
Acknowledgments	379
Index	381