

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First, we would like to thank all the colleagues and students who participated in and attended the “TransCanada: Literature, Institutions, Citizenship” conference in Vancouver, June 2005. We also thank the group of English graduate students at Simon Fraser University who, organized by Tara Lee, did an excellent job taking care of the logistics immediately before and during the conference. At the University of Guelph, Sandra Sabatini, research officer at the Office of the Dean, College of Arts, provided ongoing support in many ways. Andrea Bennett, Smaro’s undergraduate summer assistant, took exceptional care of practical affairs and of many editorial issues concerning the production of this volume at the initial stages. Paul Danyluk, Smaro’s graduate assistant, provided help in the final stage of the manuscript’s preparation. From designing and maintaining the website to handling most of the correspondence, from organizing and carrying out the fundraising drive for subsidizing students to planning and taking care of the DanceCanada party, Mark McCutcheon, Smaro’s graduate assistant for that year, performed masterfully in all his tasks. We thank Alessandra Capperdoni, David Chariandy, Jeff Derksen, Sophie McCall, and Kathy Mezei, members, along with Mark McCutcheon, of the conference’s organizing committee, for responding to our invitation to join us in this venture with great enthusiasm. Without their support, creative thinking, and hard work, the TransCanada project would not have taken off. We thank our respective institutions for their generous financial support: at the University of Guelph, the Office of the Vice President Research, the Dean's Office and the Director of the School of English and Theatre Studies, College of Arts; at Simon Fraser University, the Office of the Vice President Academic (Conference Fund), the Office of the Dean of Arts, and the Humanities Institute. We are grateful to the many publishers, Canadian and non-Canadian, who responded to our call to donate books published by and/or about the participants in the conference; we used the revenue from these books, sold at the conference, to subsidize the travel expenses of all the students who participated in the event. (A list of these publishers was included in the conference program.) We would like to thank the Canada Council for assistance with our evening of literary reading, and we acknowledge the Aid to Research Workshops and Conferences grant we received from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. Finally, Smaro would like to acknowledge the Canada Research Chair program that financed, in part, this event and that has made possible the publication of this volume. Our special thanks to Jacqueline Larson, acquisitions editor at Wilfrid Laurier University Press at the time, who demonstrated unflagging support for the publication of this volume, and to Rob Kohlmeier, managing editor of the Press, for his meticulous attention to all aspects of this volume's production.
