

Acknowledgements

This book is the result of the work conducted for my doctoral and post-doctoral research studies over the last six years. As a consequence, I am indebted to many persons who have contributed directly and indirectly to its development and realisation.

I am deeply grateful to Professor Enrica Morlicchio for welcoming me at the Department of Social Studies in Naples and for guiding me through the sociology of poverty with her passionate and inspiring work. To her and to Professor Domenico Maddaloni at the Department of Social, Political and Communication Studies at the University of Salerno I am very indebted for their constant support and advice during these years and for their detailed comments on my work.

I am also extremely grateful to Alfio Cerami for encouraging me to undertake this project, to Yuri Kazepov for his valuable comments on earlier versions of this work and to István György Tóth, András Gábos, Péter Szivós, Péter Hegedűs and all the TARKI team for their help during my stay in Budapest and for the enlightening insights they provided during our conversations.

Finally I would like to thank all my family and those colleagues and friends (especially Mera, Rosaria, Gabriella, Amalia, Federica, Raquel, Manuela, Lory, Alessandra and Ash) who have provided me with continuous advice, support and love.