

Notes on contributors

Peter Beresford OBE is Visiting Professor at the University of East Anglia, UK, and Co-Chair of Shaping Our Lives, the national disabled people's and service user-led organisation. He is a long-term user of mental health services and Emeritus Professor at Brunel University London and the University of Essex, UK. He has a long-standing track-record of involvement in the issue of participation as writer, researcher, activist and educator. His latest book is Participatory Ideology: From Exclusion to Involvement (Policy Press, 2021).

Suzanne Cahill is Adjunct Professor of Social Work and Social Policy at Trinity College Dublin, Ireland. She holds an honorary professorship in Dementia Care at the National University of Ireland Galway and is an affiliated Professor in Health and Welfare at the Institute of Gerontology in Jönköping University in Sweden. Most of her academic career has been spent researching and campaigning for the rights of people living with dementia and their family caregivers. Her most recent book is Perspectives on the Person with Dementia and Family Caregiving in Ireland (Peter Lang, 2021).

Gemma M. Carney is a critical gerontologist and Senior Lecturer in Social Policy and Ageing at the School of Social Sciences, Education and Social Work at Queen's University Belfast, UK. She is a member of the editorial board of Ageing & Society and, with Paul Nash, University of Southern California, is author of Critical Questions for Ageing Societies (Policy Press, 2020). She leads a range of interdisciplinary studies of ageing at Queen's and is currently Co-Investigator on an AHRC-funded project, Dementia in the Minds of Characters and Readers.

Sarah Donnelly is Assistant Professor of Social Work in the School of Social Policy, Social Work and Social Justice, University College Dublin, Ireland, and Co-convenor of the European Network for Gerontological Social Work (ENGSW). Sarah's research interests include ageing and dementia, adult safeguarding and capacity and decision making. Sarah is a registered social worker, an active member of the Irish Association of Social Workers (IASW) and a member of the Irish Gerontological Society.

Amanda Grenier is Professor and the Norman and Honey Schipper Chair in Gerontological Social Work at the Factor-Inwentash Faculty of Social Work, University of Toronto, and Baycrest Hospital in Canada. Amanda is an interdisciplinary scholar and critical gerontologist focused on the interface of public policies, organisational practices and older people's lived experience, with a particular focus on ageing and inequality. She currently leads a SSHRC Insight Grant on Precarious Aging. Her recent work includes Late Life Homelessness: Experiences of Disadvantage and Unequal Aging (McGill Queens University Press, 2021) and Precarity and Ageing: Understanding Insecurity and Risk in Later Life, which she has co-edited with Chris Phillipson and Richard A. Settersten Jr (Policy Press, 2021).

Trish Hafford-Letchfield is Professor of Social Work at the University of Strathclyde, UK. Her research interests are in older people from marginalised communities and their experiences of accessing and using care. Trish has more than 100 publications, with two edited books in a new series on ‘Sex and Intimacy in Later Life’ (titled Sex and Diversity in Later Life and Desexualisation in Later Life: The Limits of Sex and Intimacy) with Paul Simpson and Paul Reynolds (Policy Press, 2021). Recent research projects include the impact of COVID-19 on family carers of residents in care homes, and suicide prevention and ageing.

Joan R. Harbison is Adjunct Professor at the School of Social Work, Dalhousie University, Canada. Her scholarship focuses on critical interdisciplinary approaches to ageing in both national and international contexts. Her recent work includes co-editing New Challenges to Ageing in the Rural North: A Critical Interdisciplinary Perspective with Päivi Naskali and Shahnaj Begum (Springer, 2019) and, with her interdisciplinary research team from social work, law and sociology, authoring Contesting Elder Abuse and Neglect: Ageism, Risk and the Rhetoric of Rights in the Mistreatment of Older People (University of British Columbia Press, 2016).

Paul Higgs is Professor of the Sociology of Ageing at University College London, UK. He has published extensively in gerontology, medical sociology and sociology. He has published 14 books (seven with Chris Gilleard), including: Cultures of Ageing: Self, Citizen and Society (Longman, 2000); Contexts of Ageing: Class, Cohort and Community (Polity, 2005); Rethinking Old Age: Theorising the Fourth Age (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015); and Social Divisions and Later and Life: Difference, Diversity and Inequality (Policy, 2020). Paul is editor of Social Theory and Health. He holds fellowships from the UK Academy of Social Sciences and the Gerontological Society of America.

Alisoun Milne is Professor of Social Gerontology and Social Work at the School of Sociology, Social Policy and Social Research, University of Kent, UK. She is a registered social worker. Alisoun’s research interests are in four intersecting areas: social work with older people and their families; mental health in later life; family caring; and long-term care. She is widely published. Her most recent book is Mental Health in Later Life: Taking a Lifecourse Approach (Policy Press, 2020). She is currently co-authoring a book for Emerald Publishing on Care and Caring. Alisoun is a member of the Research Excellence Framework 2021 sub-panel for Social Work and Social Policy and a Fellow of the UK Academy of the Social Sciences.

Lorna Montgomery is Senior Lecturer in Social Work in the School of Social Sciences, Education and Social Work, Queen's University Belfast, UK, and is Director of Practice Learning. She practiced as a social worker/manager in the adult sector for 20 years, and has also worked for five years in a non-governmental organisation in Uganda, East Africa, conducting research on cross-cultural bereavement practices. Her teaching and research interests include adult safeguarding, mental health, parenting and cross-cultural practice. Her latest contributions include articles in The Journal of Adult Protection and Practice.

Anna Olaison is Associate Professor of Social Work at CESAR Centre for Social Work at Uppsala University in Sweden. Her programme of research aims to investigate how neoliberalism, changing social policies and standardisation of social services influence needs assessment practices. She has published on questions related to decision making and delivery of care and services for older people as well as social workers' abilities to use discretion in assessment meetings and documentation practices. Anna is a social worker and she leads several funded projects on the needs assessment practices of care services for older people.

Mo Ray is Professor of Health and Social Care in the School of Health and Social Care, University of Lincoln, UK. After qualifying as a social worker in 1990, she worked as a social worker/care manager in adult teams, specialising in practice with older people. Her interest in long-lasting relationships and the impact of ill health and disability led to Mo completing a part-time PhD at Keele University, UK, on marriages that last a lifetime. She subsequently secured an ESRC Fellowship which led to a social work lectureship at Keele University. She worked in a number of roles, including Director of Social Work Studies. Mo was awarded a personal Chair in Gerontological Social Work in 2014. Her research interests focus on experiences of ageing, ageing and care and social relationships in older age.

Marjaana Seppänen is Professor of Social Work at the University of Helsinki, Finland. Her background is in social sciences (especially social work) and she has extensively studied and published on questions connected to gerontological social work, ageing, well-being and the living conditions of older adults. Marjaana is part of several international research networks in gerontology and social work.

Tamara Sussman is Associate Professor in the School of Social Work at McGill University in Canada. Her programme of research aims to uncover the ways in which health service systems can exacerbate rather than alleviate distress, exclusion and disadvantage for older persons and their families. Tamara's contributions have been increasingly directed towards examining and improving experiences of living and dying within the context of long-term care, an aspect of the service system fraught with challenges.

Sandra Torres is Professor of Sociology and the Chair in Social Gerontology at Uppsala University in Sweden. Her work as a critical social gerontologist problematises old age-related constructs and deconstructs some of the taken-for-granted assumptions that inform research, policy and practice. Sandra is the President of the Research Committee on Aging of the International Sociological Association and of the Social-Behavioral Section of the International Association of Gerontology and Geriatrics: European Region. She holds fellowships from the (Swedish) Royal Society of Sciences and the Gerontological Society of America, is editor-in-chief of Ageing & Society, and author of Ethnicity and Old Age: Expanding our Imagination (Policy Press, 2019). At present she is co-editing (with Alistair Hunter) the Handbook of Migration and Ageing (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2023).

Paul Willis is Associate Professor of Social Work and Social Gerontology at the University of Bristol, UK. Paul is a registered social worker and researcher in social care, ageing and social inclusion. His current research interests include loneliness, ageing and masculinities; sexuality, gender identity and ageing; and inclusive housing for older adults. Recent funded projects include social inclusion practices in housing with care and support; older men's experiences of loneliness; and health and social care for trans adults in later life. Paul is a Senior Research Fellow of the National Institute for Health Research School for Social Care Research, England.