

Notes on Authors

Laura Rosanne Adderley is Associate Professor of History, and also affiliated with Latin American studies and Africana studies, at Tulane University. She is author of 'New Negroes from Africa': Slave Trade Abolition and Free African Settlement in the Nineteenth-Century Caribbean (Indiana University Press, 2006) and is currently completing a book on life and labour among the very first Africans taken by British authorities from illegally operating slave ships in the Caribbean between 1807 and 1830.

Clayton Boeyink is Research Fellow at the University of Edinburgh (Centre of African Studies). He interrogates the politics, practices and coloniality of refugee self-reliance in Tanzania. His current Displaced Somali and Congolese project focuses on healthcare at the intersection of gender among displaced Somalis and Congolese in Somalia, DRC, Kenya and South Africa. His most recent publication is 'On broker exploitation and violence: from madalali to cartel bosses in the food aid resale economy of Tanzanian refugee camps' (Development and Change, 2021).

Jerónimo Botero Marino is Dean of the School of Law and Social Sciences at Icesi University in Cali, Colombia. He is Professor of the Department of Humanities and founding member of the Center for Ethics and Democracy, and holds a PhD degree from the University of Barcelona. He is part of Grupo Nexos: Interdisciplinary Group for Sociocultural and Psychological Studies, and specializes in ethics and political philosophy. Publications include for Signos Filosóficos and Tópicos.

Nasreen Chowdhory is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science, University of Delhi. She is author of Citizenship and Belonging in South Asia: Contested Terrains (Springer, 2018) and has edited Deterritorialised Identity and Transborder Movement in South Asia with Nasir Uddin (Springer, 2019), Citizenship, Nationalism and Refugeehood of Rohingyas in Southern Asia with Biswajit Mohanty (Springer, 2020) and Gender, Identity and Migration in India (Palgrave Macmillan, 2022) with Paula Banerjee.

Phillip Cole teaches politics and international relations at the University of the West of England, Bristol. His books include Philosophies of Exclusion: Liberal Political Theory and Immigration (Edinburgh University Press, 2000) and, with Christopher Heath Wellman, Debating the Ethics of Immigration: Is There a Right to Exclude? (Oxford University Press, 2011).

Lina Ewert is an independent researcher. A sociologist by training, her research interest lies at the cross-section of migration, social inequality and emerging technologies with a particular focus on innovating co-creation processes. Her doctoral thesis combines the themes of intelligence and migration, looking closely at the role of technology firms and security consultancies for data-driven ways of knowing and sorting that appear to colonize humanitarian approaches to displacement. Ewert has published in the International Journal of Migration and Border Studies (2020) and for the SOURCE Network of Excellence.

Sharla M. Fett is Professor of History at Occidental College in Los Angeles with research interests in slavery, abolition, health and healing in the US South and Atlantic World. Publications include Working Cures: Healing, Health and Power on Southern Slave Plantations (University of North Carolina Press, 2002) and Recaptured Africans: Surviving Slave Ships, Detention, and Dislocation in the Final Years of the Slave Trade (UNCP, 2017).

Ella Fratantuono is Assistant Professor of History at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Her research focuses on migration, settlement, governmentality, social engineering and state-building in the Middle East. She is currently working on her first book project, which explores the development of a centralized immigration regime in the late 19th- and early 20th-century Ottoman Empire. Her articles have appeared in publications such as Journal of Genocide Research (2019) and Middle East Journal of Refugee Studies (2017).

Leonie Jegen is a PhD candidate at the University of Amsterdam. Her research considers the externalization of European border control in the context of the Senegalese migrant smuggling policy. Previously, she worked at the European Council on Refugees and Exiles (ECRE) and on research projects on West African migration governance at the University of Freiburg and the Vrije Universiteit Brussels (VUB). Jegen has published in the Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies (2020).

Panagiota (Penny) Koutrolikou is Associate Professor at the School of Architecture, NTUA. Her research interests include cities and urban conflicts, urban crises and governance, geopolitics of migration and development, and socio-spatial justice and geographies of rights. She is currently involved in research projects on legal geographies of (un)safety and asylum in Afghanistan, the socio-spatial relations of post-2016 Turkish migration to Athens, redefining spatial justice in Athens as a city in crisis, and governmentalities of urban crises. Koutrolikou has published work in Citizenship Studies (2017), Antipode (2016) and Urban Studies (2012).

Martin Lemberg-Pedersen is Honorary Associate Professor at the University of Warwick, and Head of Policy and Society for Amnesty International, Denmark. His academic research involves interdisciplinary analyses of Western asylum, border and deportation practices, and military-technological-industrial relations. He has focused on EU relations to forced migration in Greek, Turkish and Libyan contexts, Danish externalization policies, and colonial precedents to Western displacement politics. His publications have appeared in Forced Migration Review (2021), Journal of Borderlands Studies (2021), Citizenship Studies (2020), Global Affairs (2019), Questions of International Law (2019) and Etikk i Praksis – Nordic Journal of Applied Ethics (2018).

Lucy Mayblin is Senior Lecturer in Sociology at the University of Sheffield. Her research focuses on asylum, human rights, policy-making and the legacies of colonialism. She is the author of three books: Asylum After Empire (Rowman and Littlefield International, 2017), Impoverishment and Asylum (Routledge, 2019) and Migration Studies and Colonialism (Polity, 2021). She is currently studying crimes of solidarity as part of a Philip Leverhulme Prize fellowship.

Felicity Atieno Okoth is Research Associate at the African Migration and Development Policy Centre and a Tutorial Fellow at Moi University, Kenya, where she teaches International and Intercultural Communication courses. Her research interests include understanding how African migrants' situated practices, specifically intercultural relations, inform their migration aspirations. Okoth has published in New Media and Mass Communication (2017).

Nina Sahraoui is Marie Skłodowska-Curie Fellow at CRESPPA, CNRS in Paris where she conducts the project CYBERGEN (2021–22). Her research explores themes at the crossroads of interdisciplinary studies of migration, gender and healthcare. Sahraoui's books and volumes include Racialised Care Workers and European Older-Age Care (Palgrave, 2019), Gender, Work and Migration (with Megha Amrith, Routledge, 2018) and Borders across Healthcare (Berghahn Books, 2020).

Eva Magdalena Stambøl is Postdoctoral Researcher at the Department of Criminology and Sociology of Law, University of Oslo, and at the Otto Suhr Institute for Political Science, Freie Universität Berlin. Her research takes place at the intersection of criminology and international relations and focuses on internal security in EU foreign policy and external relations, borders, transnational criminal justice, and extra-legal governance in West Africa and Latin America. She has published most recently in journals including Review of International Studies (2021), Theoretical Criminology (2021) and Punishment & Society (2021).

Peter Teunissen is Early-Stage Researcher and PhD candidate with the Horizon 2020 Project MOVES, Migration and Modernity at the Freie Universität Berlin, and Universidade do Porto. His research focuses on the intersections between migration industries, b/orderd mobilities, and the infrastructures of exclusion and specifically how this unfolds at the Greek/Turkish borderlands. Peter has published in the Journal of Borderlands Studies (2020) and Social Inclusion (2020).

Shamna Thacham Poyil is a PhD Candidate in the Department of Political Science at the University of Delhi. Her research focuses on the narrative of statelessness of the Rohingyas and the politics of exclusion. She has authored several book chapters on this topic, the most recent being 'National Identity and Conceptualization of Nationalism among Rohingya' in N. Chowdhory and B. Mohanty (eds) Citizenship, Nationalism and Refugeehood of Rohingyas in Southern Asia (Springer, 2020).

Mathias Hatleskog Tjønn holds an MPhil in Modern International and Transnational History (MITRA) from the University of Oslo. He is employed as a research assistant at the Peace Research Institute Oslo (PRIO) and his research interests include Italo-Libyan relations, Mediterranean migration, postcolonialism and transnational history. Recent publications appear in Babylon – Nordic Journal for Middle East Studies (2019) and Global Histories – A Student Journal (2018).

Elsa Tyszler is Postdoctoral Researcher at the Centre for Sociological and Political Research in Paris. She researches migration control at borders through the lens of gender and race. After the Moroccan-Spanish borders, her current fieldwork focuses on the French borders. Among her publications are 'Humanitarianism and black female bodies: violence and intimacy at the Moroccan-Spanish border' (The Journal of North African Studies, 2021); and 'From controlling mobilities to control over women's bodies: gendered effects of EU border externalization in Morocco' (Comparative Migration Studies, 2019).

Aurora Vergara-Figueroa is Director of the Afrodiasporic Studies Center at Icesi University, Cali, Colombia, and a W.E.B. Du Bois Research Institute Fellow at Harvard University. She is an Afro-Colombian woman and holds a PhD from the Sociology Department of the University of Massachusetts Amherst. Her main research interests are the sociological study of Afro-Colombians deracinated from the Colombian Pacific coast and the long durée of land dispossession in the world system. She is the author of Afrodescendant Resistance to Deracination in Colombia: Massacre at Bellavista-Bojayá-Chocó (Springer, 2018).