
The Politics of Resentment

Institute for Research on Public Policy

Founded in 1972, the Institute for Research on Public Policy is an independent, national, nonprofit organization. IRPP seeks to improve public policy in Canada by generating research, providing insight, and sparking debate that will contribute to the public policy decision-making process and strengthen the quality of the public policy decisions made by Canadian governments, citizens, institutions, and organizations. IRPP's independence is assured by an endowment fund, to which federal and provincial governments and the private sector have contributed.

As part of its mission, IRPP seeks to disseminate the diverse views and perspectives found in different parts of the country. Recently, the Institute has published a collection of essays on the divergent perspectives in Quebec and the rest of Canada on pivotal events in Canadian history; and a paper by IRPP Senior Scholar Tom Courchene on Ontario's place in the North American economic and political community. In an effort to build bridges between Canada's two main language communities, IRPP has also published English translations of a collection of reports offering the Quebec perspective on the social union and of Alain Dubuc's series of editorials on the future of the Quebec nation (Policy Options, June 2000). In joining forces with UBC Press to publish Philip Resnick's The Politics of Resentment: British Columbia Regionalism and Canadian Unity, IRPP is seeking to provide Canadians with a greater understanding of the forces shaping the political agenda and regional identity in Canada's westernmost province.
