

CONTENTS

Foreword / vii

Robert Bothwell

Acknowledgments / xiii

Introduction: Nuclear If Necessary, but Not Necessarily Nuclear / 3

Susan Colbourn

PART 1: A SEAT AT THE TABLE

- 1 Very Close Together: Balancing Canadian Interests on Atomic Energy Control, 1945–46 / 17

Katie Davis

- 2 “We Do Not Wish to Be Obstructionist”: How Canada Took and Kept a Seat on NATO’s Nuclear Planning Group / 40

Timothy Andrews Sayle

PART 2: POLITICAL POWDERKEGS

- 3 Howard Green, Disarmament, and Canadian-American Defence Relations, 1959–63: “A Queer, Confused World” / 67

Michael D. Stevenson

- 4 Neutralism, Nationalism, and Nukes, Oh My! Revisiting Peacemaker or Powder-Monkey and Canadian Strategy in the Nuclear Age / 88

Asa McKercher

- 5 The Road to Scarborough: Lester Pearson and Nuclear Weapons, 1954–63 / 109

Jack Cunningham

PART 3: IN SEARCH OF NUCLEAR TASKS AT HOME AND ABROAD

- 6 Who's Going to Invade Arctic Canada, Anyway? Debating the Acquisition of the Nuclear Submarine in the 1980s / 133

Susan Colbourn

- 7 “Baptism by Fire”: Canadian Soldiers and Radiation Exposure at Nevada and Maralinga / 153

Matthew S. Wiseman

PART 4: IMPORTING BY ACCIDENT, EXPORTING BY DESIGN

- 8 A Northern Nuclear Nightmare? Operation Morning Light and the Recovery of Cosmos 954 in the Northwest Territories, 1978 / 181

Ryan Dean and P. Whitney Lackenbauer

- 9 Strengthening Nuclear Safeguards: The Transformation of Canadian Nuclear Policy toward Argentina and South Korea after India's 1974 Nuclear Test / 207

Se Young Jang

Conclusion: Nuclear Victorians / 227

Timothy Andrews Sayle

Contributors / 234

Index / 237