

Contents

List of Illustrations and Tables	ix
List of Abbreviations	xi
Historical Highlights	xii
List of Key People	xvi
Foreword	xviii
Yuhong Jiang
Preface	xxiii
Introduction: Nursing, Shifted	3
Part 1:
Before the Closure of the Peking Union Medical College
1 China Calling (1914–33): Missionaries, Western Nursing, and the Rockefellers	23
2 Unsettling Nursing (1932–40): Japanese Invasion and the Shift to Chinese Leadership	60
3 Shifting Missions (1936–40): The Erosion of Missionary Nursing in West China	81
4 Waiting to Exhale (1940–42): Uncertainty, Internment, and the Japanese Takeover of the PUMC	116
Part 2:
After the Closure of the Peking Union Medical College
5 Starting Over in West China (1943–45): Displacement and Reimagining Elite Nursing in Free China	167

6	Fighting the Foundation’s “Darling Child” (1943–46): Conflicts with the PUMC	204
7	“Our Triumphant Return” (1946–49): Postwar Dreams and Dashed Hopes	230
8	The Last Chapter (1949–51): Missions, the PUMC, and the End of Modern Nursing in China	257
	Conclusion: The Rockefeller Effect: Nursing as a Liberating Movement for Women	281
	Acknowledgments	292
	Appendix 1: List of Nurses at the West China Mission, 1895–1951	296
	Appendix 2: PUMC Nursing Faculty, 1917–49	299
	Appendix 3: List of Interned Nurses in China	303
	Appendix 4: PUMC Nursing Graduates, 1924–39	313
	Notes	317
	Bibliography	367
	Index	373