

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I wish to thank the trustees of the Workingmen's Institute Library of New Harmony, Indiana, for permission to edit and publish the European Journals of William Maclure. I am also indebted to the Alderman Library of the University of Virginia for allowing me to use microfilm copies of Joseph C. Cabell's notebooks. The work of editing Maclure's journals was greatly facilitated by research and editing grants from the following institutions: two grants from the National Science Foundation, one in 1972-73, and another in 1980-81; and a grant from the American Philosophical Society for the summer of 1976. I appreciated very much having been selected to attend the sixth annual Institute for the Editing of Historical Documents held at the University of South Carolina in 1977, which was sponsored by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission.

In the course of doing research for this project I met a number of "scholars and gentlemen" at various universities, libraries, and professional meetings. To them I owe much for their sound advice and willingness to spend time answering questions concerning source materials, bibliography, and editing techniques. Some have acted as references for grant proposals and others have provided important leads, or copies of documents of which I was unaware. They are: Roger Hahn, University of California at Berkeley; John C. Greene, University of Connecticut; Nathan Reingold, Joseph Henry Papers; David R. Chesnutt, Laurens Papers; Larry I. Bland, George C. Marshall Papers; Whitfield J. Bell, Jr., American Philosophical Society; the late Henry Faul, University of Pennsylvania; and Ralph G. Schwarz, formerly with Historic New Harmony, Inc.

I am very grateful for the assistance I received from Dr. Alberto G. Novales of the University of Madrid who reviewed the edited journals of Maclure's travels in Spain. I especially wish to thank Mr. Colan MacArthur of Dunfanaghy, Ireland, for thoroughly researching Maclure's travels in Ireland for me, besides providing valuable information about Jean François Berger, a Swiss geologist.

George W. White, formerly research professor emeritus of geology at the University of Illinois, Urbana, guided and advised me in editing and research tasks almost from the inception of this project, and I shall always be grateful to him for his patience and the confidence he extended to me when he was alive.

At the Workingmen's Institute Library, Mrs. Aline B. Cook and her staff always provided the utmost in professional service, and in the process became my friends. Mrs. Josephine M. Elliott, bibliographer extraordinaire, who was formerly with the Special Collections Department at Indiana State University, Evansville, perhaps knows more about the collections in the library at New Harmony than anyone alive. Over the years she has supplied significant data and insights to aid my research, and for this I cannot begin to thank her enough.

For a period of twenty years, Mr. Kenyon C. Rosenberg, former librarian, teacher, and administrator, and currently Associate Director of the National Technical Information Service, United States Department of Commerce, has not only provided moral support, but also photographed the diagrams in the journals, researched bibliographies through the national computer networks, and secured typing and copying services. For this I am deeply appreciative, as I am for the forbearance and understanding of my wife Rosemary and my daughters throughout this long but interesting labor.
