

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I gratefully acknowledge the aid given me by the following persons and institutions. Their contributions facilitated my research, organization, and writing of this study; I am indebted to them: Edmund Perry, who encouraged, supported, and defended this as a dissertation project; John Fisher and Carol Ann Lorenz, whose advice has helped germinate and winnow many of my plans; Vivian Cloud and John Nichols, who have introduced me to the Ojibwa language; Åke Hultkrantz, who suggested excellent revisions of my thesis; Katherine Gunning McCarthy and Jessica Bullard, who helped in the preparation of the index and proofs.

John Beaver, Simon Fobister, Andy Keewatin, Pat Loon, Steve Loon, Tom Payesh, Kai Erikson, Hiroyuki Miyamatsu and Anastasia Shkilnyk treated me to great hospitality and inspiration at Grassy Narrows Ojibwa Reserve.

Northwestern University's Graduate School and Department of History and Literature of Religions, Colgate University, and Hobart & William Smith Colleges have enabled me to conduct my research through grants of necessary money.

I am grateful to Murphy D. Smith, Chief Archivist, American Philosophical Society; James H. Kellar, Director, Great Lakes - Ohio Valley Archives of the Glenn A. Black Laboratory of Archaeology at Indiana University, Bloomington; Ruby Shields, Chief of Reference, Manuscripts Division of the Minnesota Historical Society; James R. Glenn, Archivist, the Smithsonian Institution; Josephine L. Harper, Reference Archivist at the State Historical Society of Wisconsin; the personnel of these institutions, as well as of the University of Chicago library, Columbia University library, Hobart & William Smith Colleges library, the New York Public Library, Newberry Library, Northwestern University library, the Peabody Museum of American Archaeology and Ethnology at Harvard University, and Union Theological Seminary's Missionary Library, for the use of their resources.
