

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In order to acknowledge those who have helped produce this book, I must go back considerably further than most scholars usually do because I am truly indebted to those who have influenced and supported my education since I can first remember. Several women in my life were my first teachers: my mother, my grandmother, and the women who taught me at Komen-sky Elementary School and Skinner Classical School—Sherry Sharvat, Fran Allen, and Roseanne Patterson, among others. Each of them in her own way instilled in me a love of learning and an interest in history that drew a child like me down the unlikely path to a doctoral degree and the writing of a book. As I continued to develop intellectually, the teachers at the Latin School of Chicago—including Jill Acker, Ernestine Austin, Ingrid Dorer Fitzpatrick, Lillian Mackal, and especially David Spruance—continued to develop my passion for intellectual inquiry and a love of history and writing. They gave me the foundation that took me to college and prepared me for an unexpected academic career.

I am a native-born Chicagoan, and this project emerged out of my interest in understanding the city's Mexican and Puerto Rican communities and their histories. I greatly appreciate the people who allowed me to do oral histories with them—Alicia Amador, Carlos Arango, Sijisfredo Aviles, Phil Ayala, Mathew Barcelo, Maria Cerda, the Reverend Walter L. Coleman, Linda Coronado, Joe Escamilla, Rosemary Escamilla, Hector and María Gamboa, Jesus García, Jane Garza-Mancillas, Dr. Aida Giachello, "Cha Che" Gomez, Rosa Hernandez de la Llata, José "Cha Cha" Jiménez, Professor Luis Leal, Monse Lucas-Figueroa, María Mangual, Pablo Medina, María Ovalle, Laura Paz, Sylvia Puente, Gamaliel Ramírez, Leonard Ramírez, Modesto Rivera, Myrna Rodriguez, Aida Sanchez-Romano, Steve Schensul, Gwen Stern, Carlos Valencia, Mike Vásquez, and Pat Wright. They gave generously of their time and connected me with other important community leaders. Special thanks to Phil Ayala, who welcomed me into El Centro de la Causa like an old friend and shared with me the agency's historical archives. John Harrington shared with me a copy of his dissertation. The late Alicia Amador allowed me access to her personal archives, as did Leticia Guerrero. María Pesqueira and Carmelo Rodríguez graciously gave me access to the records and private archives of Mujeres Latinas en Acción, before my visit inspired them to deposit them at DePaul University's Special Collections. The late María Mangual also shared generously of her time to tell me how she helped start Mujeres.

My mentors and advisers, Vicki L. Ruiz and Ramón Gutiérrez, provided invaluable guidance and direction when I first started this project and have been supportive throughout my academic career. Thanks also to Yen Espiritu, George Lipsitz, Matt García, Gabriela Arredondo, Anne Martínez, Mike Innis-Jiménez, Jim Barrett, Gina Pérez, Pablo Mitchell, Adrian Burgos, David Gutiérrez, and Carmen Whalen, who have all enthusiastically supported my scholarship.

This book could have not been completed without the assistance of the archivists and librarians who helped me with research at a number of places: the Chicago History Museum; the Municipal Reference Collection and the Special Collections at the Harold Washington Branch of the Chicago Public Library; the university archives at the University of Notre Dame; and the Special Collections Library at Stanford University. Special thanks go to Mary Diaz at the Special Collections Library at the University of Illinois at Chicago; Martin Tuohy at the National Archives and Records Administration, Great Lakes Region; Kathryn DeGraff and Morgen MacIntosh at Special Collections, DePaul University Library; Juan Carlos Román, Neftali Quintán, and José Charón at the Archivo General de Puerto Rico; Julio E. Quirós Alcalá and staff at the Fundación Luis Muñoz Marín; Amílcar Tirado at the University of Puerto Rico, Río Piedras; and Nélida Pérez, Pedro Juan Hernández, Félix Rivera, Jorge Matos, and their staff at El Centro de Estudios Puertorriqueños, Hunter College.

This book benefitted from generous funding from the Center for the Study of Race and Ethnicity at the University of California, San Diego; a Ford Foundation Dissertation Fellowship as well as a Ford Foundation Postdoctoral Fellowship hosted by Brown University; and a Chancellor's Postdoctoral Fellowship hosted by the Latino/a Studies Program at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. The College of Arts and Humanities and the History Department at Ohio State University also provided me critical research funds.

Numerous people have commented on my work or offered feedback at various stages. Gina Pérez, Carmen Whalen, and Merída Rua gave me suggestions and references early on in my research that proved very useful. The organizers of the Mexican American History Workshop at the University of Houston—Luis Alvarez, Monica Perales, Raul Ramos, and Guadalupe San Miguel—and their participants provided a wonderful environment for exchanging work and offering one another suggestions. I thank Gina Pérez, Shelley Lee, and Pablo Mitchell at Oberlin College and the audiences at numerous academic conferences. During my year at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, I found a supportive community among Arlene Torres, Lisa Cacho, Richard T. Rodriguez, Isabel Molina, Adrian Burgos, Larry Parker, Wanda Pillow, James D. Anderson, Aide Acosta, and Abel Correa. At Brown University, thanks go to Evelyn Hu-DeHart, Rhacel Parrenas, Matt García, Elliott Gorn, and Samuel Zipp.

Thanks to dear friends Angelica Rivera, Dalia Rodríguez, Jillian Baez, Julie Hua, and Grace Kim for their friendship, support, and encouragement since our days in graduate school. Solangel Cubas, Adey Fisseha, Lourdes Castro-Ramírez, Jorge Ramírez, Luis and Rosa Urrieta, and their families have offered their friendship and welcomed me into their homes on various occasions.

In the History Department at Ohio State University, a number of colleagues have provided a warm and welcoming community and have kindly read my work and given me important feedback. Thanks to Leslie Alexander, Judy Wu, Stephanie Smith, Hasan Jeffries, Mytheli Sreenivas, Alcira Dueñas, Ousman Kobo, Ahmad Sikainga, Derek Heng, Ying Zhang, Kevin Boyle, Lucy Murphy, James Genova, Susan Hartmann, Birgitte Soland, Ken Andrien, Donna Guy, Bill Childs, David Steigerwald, David Stebenne, Margaret Newell, Robin Judd, Chris Otter, Manse Blackford, and Steve Conn. Theodora Dragostinova and Kristina Sessa formed a wonderful writing group with me in which we shared insightful and helpful comments with one another across our vastly different fields. Wendy Smooth motivated me as a great writing partner as well. Graduate students Angela Ryan, Danielle Olden, Delia Fernandez, and Cameron Shriver offered critical research assistance, as did one of OSU's finest history undergraduates, Kyle Lincicome. The Latino/a Studies faculty and those affiliated with the Center for Latin American Studies at OSU (Pat Enciso, Guisela Latorre, Frederick Aldama, Theresa Delgadillo, Jeff Cohen, Ignacio Corona, and Laura Podalsky) have provided a supportive community, as have Debra Modellmog, Pranav Jani, Joe Ponce, Chad Allen, Maurice Stevens, Mark Walters, and members of OSU's Latino/a community (Indra Leyva-Santiago, Inés Valdez, Francisco Gómez-Bellengé, Yolanda Zepeda, José Cabral, Valente Alvarez, and Victor Mora). Special thanks go to Leslie Alexander, Judy Wu, Stephanie Smith, Lucy Murphy, and Debra Modellmog for their warm friendship and unwavering support.

The staff at the University of Chicago Press did tremendous work to see this book come to press. A special thanks to Robert Devens, who took an interest in the project from the beginning and has guided it over its long journey. Thanks to the series editors and to Mary Corrado and Russell Damian. Susan Cohan did meticulous copyediting, and I thank her for all her hard work and patience. Lorrin Thomas and an anonymous reviewer provided excellent comments and suggestions and improved this manuscript significantly. All errors and omissions are of course my own.

Finally, I thank my family for their support and inspiration. Our everyday lived experiences, especially those of my late grandmother, provided the spark for my academic exploration. I did not fully understand and appreciate the historical significance of my grandmother's stories until she passed away, and while she did not see this book come to fruition, she is in these pages nonetheless. I thank my mother, brothers, sisters, their spouses, and my niece and nephews for all their love and support. They have waited very patiently to see the completion of this book, which I dedicate to them.
