

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Foreword	xi
DAVID GOLDFIELD
Introduction: Historians and the Urban South's Civil War	I
ANDREW L. SLAP AND FRANK TOWERS
Part One: The Big Picture
I. Regionalism and Urbanism as Problems in Confederate Urban History	27
J. MATTHEW GALLMAN
2. Urban Processes in the Confederacy's Development, Experience, and Consequences	46
DAVID MOLTKE-HANSEN
Part Two: Secession
3. To Be the "New York of the South": Urban Boosterism and the Secession Movement	77
FRANK TOWERS
4. Gender and Household Metaphors in Mid-Nineteenth-Century Nation-Building Cities	99
T. LLOYD BENSON

Part Three: Gender

5. Stephen Spalding's Fourth of July in New Orleans 125
MICHAEL PIERSON
6. "More like Amazons than starving people":
Women's Urban Riots in Georgia in 1863 147
KEITH S. BOHANNON

Part Four: Emancipation

7. African American Veterans, the Memphis Region, and the Urbanization of the Postwar South 171
ANDREW L. SLAP
8. Black Political Mobilization and the Spatial Transformation of Natchez 190
JUSTIN BEHREND
9. African Americans' Struggle for Education, Citizenship, and Freedom, in Mobile, Alabama, 1865-1868 215
HILARY N. GREEN

Part Five: A New Urban South

10. Invasion, Destruction, and the Remaking of Civil War Atlanta 239
WILLIAM A. LINK
11. Freeing the Lavish Hand of Nature: Environment and
Economy in Nineteenth-Century Hampton Roads 261
JOHN MAJEWSKI
- Conclusion: Cities and the History of the Civil War South 286
ANDREW L. SLAP AND FRANK TOWERS

- Contributors 291
- Index 295