

Contents

	Prelude: Paris, 1949	1
	Introduction: The Origins of Cool	7
1	Lester Young and the Birth of Cool	37
2	Humphrey Bogart and the Birth of Noir Cool from the Great Depression	73
3	Albert Camus and the Birth of Existential Cool from the Idea of Rebellion (and the Blues)	121
4	Billie Holiday and Simone de Beauvoir: Toward a Postwar Cool for Women	165
5	Cool Convergences, 1950: Jazz, Noir, Existentialism	187
	A Generational Interlude:
	Postwar II (1953–1963) and the Shift in Cool	225
6	Kerouac and the Cool Mind: Jazz and Zen	239
7	From Noir Cool to Vegas Cool: Swinging into Prosperity with Frank Sinatra	271
8	American Rebel Cool: Brando, Dean, Elvis	307
9	Sonny Rollins and Miles Davis Sound Out Cool Individuality	347
10	Hip versus Cool in The Fugitive Kind (1960) and Paris Blues (1962)	383
11	Lorraine Hansberry and the End of Postwar Cool	403
	Epilogue: The Afterlives of Postwar Cool	439
	Acknowledgments	461
	Notes	465
	Index	529

Figure 1. Miles Davis in Paris with Juliette Gréco, “the muse of the existentialists,” in 1949
(© Jean-Phillipe Charbonnier, Getty Images).