

CONTRIBUTORS

Daniel Dahlstrom is Professor of Philosophy and Chair of the Department of Philosophy at Boston University, and has served as Visiting Professor at the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (Belgium). He is the author of Das logische Vorurteil: Untersuchungen zur Wahrheitstheorie des frühen Heidegger (1994) and Heidegger's Concept of Truth (2001), editor of sixteen collections of essays, translator of important works from German to English, and author of numerous articles on medieval philosophy, German philosophy, aesthetics, logic, and the philosophy of science.

Richard Fincham is Assistant Professor in Philosophy at the American University in Cairo. He is the author of various articles on Kant, German idealism, and German Romanticism. He is working on a monograph on Schelling's philosophy of nature.

Joseph P. Lawrence is Professor of Philosophy at the College of the Holy Cross, Worcester, Massachusetts. He is the author of Schellings Philosophie des ewigen Anfangs (1989). In addition to a number of specialized articles on Schelling, he has also written a variety of essays on topics ranging from Socrates to Thomas Mann and has been a regular contributor to the Turkish newspaper Zaman. His Becoming Socrates will soon appear in a series sponsored by the Comparative and Continental Philosophy Circle. He is currently working on a book entitled Philosophical Religion.

Diane Morgan is Lecturer in the School of Fine Art, History of Art and Cultural Studies at the University of Leeds. Her research interests include Enlightenment thought (especially Kant), European modernity, and utopianism. She is the author of Kant Trouble: The Obscurities of the Enlightened (2000), coeditor of Cosmopolitics and the Emergence of a Future (with Gary Banham; 2007), and coeditor of Nihilism Now! "Monsters of Energy" (with Keith Ansell-Pearson; 2000). She is currently engaged in two monograph projects: Kant, Cosmopolitics and Globality and The Reaffirmation of Social Values in the Work of Saint-Simon, Fourier and Proudhon.

Thomas Nenon is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Memphis. He is the author of Objectivitaet und endlich Erkenntnis (1986), coeditor of vol. 25 (Aufsätze und Vorträge 1911–21) and vol. 27 (Aufsätze und Vorträge 1922–37) of the Husserliana, and author of a number of articles on Husserl, Heidegger, Kant and German idealism, hermeneutics, and the philosophy of the social sciences. He has served as review editor for Husserl Studies, President of the Center for Advanced Research in Phenomenology, and as Director of the Center for the Humanities at the University of Memphis. His current research interests include Husserl's theories of personhood and subjectivity, Husserl's ethical theory, and Kant and Hegel's practical philosophy.

Terry Pinkard is University Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Georgetown University. He is the author of Hegel's Phenomenology: The Sociality of Reason (1996), Hegel: A Biography (2000), and German Philosophy 1760–1860: The Legacy of Idealism (2002), and editor of Heine: On the History of Religion and Philosophy in Germany (2007), and has published numerous articles on German philosophy from Kant to the present.

Sonia Sikka is Associate Professor of Philosophy at the University of Ottawa, Canada. Her primary research interests are in modern European philosophy and philosophy of culture. She has written on Heidegger, Levinas, and Nietzsche, and has recently been working on issues related to cultural identity and pluralism within Herder's thought. Her publications on Herder include: "Herder's Critique of Pure Reason" (Review of Metaphysics), "On the Value of Happiness: Herder contra Kant" (Canadian Journal of Philosophy), "Herder and the Concept of Race" (Herder Yearbook, 2006), "Enlightened Relativism: The Case of Herder" (Philosophy and Social Criticism, 2005), and "Herder on the Relation Between Language and World" (History of Philosophy Quarterly, 2004).

Lawrence S. Stepelevich is Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Villanova University. He has written numerous articles on Hegel and the Hegelian schools. He is the author of Hegel's Philosophy of Action (1983); has edited several works, including Young Hegelianism: An Anthology (1983; reprinted 1997), and Selected Essays on G. W. F. Hegel (1993); and has translated several works, including Bruno Bauer's 1841 work, The Trumpet of the Last Judgement Against Hegel the Atheist and Antichrist (1989). He has also written entries on various members of the Young Hegelian school in The Routledge Encyclopedia of Philosophy, The Edinburgh Encyclopedia of Continental Philosophy, Blackwell's Compassion to Continental Philosophy, and The Dictionary of Literary Biography.

Bart Vandenabeele is Professor of Aesthetics and Philosophy of Art at Ghent University (Belgium). He is the author and editor of several books in aesthetics, philosophy of art, and philosophy of language, editor of A Companion to Schopenhauer (2011), and writes on eighteenth-century aesthetics and on post-Kantian nineteenth- and twentieth-century philosophy, especially Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, and Lyotard. His current research draws on both historical and contemporary approaches to aesthetics and the philosophy of art, is informed by recent debates in art theory, and engages the philosophical aspects of contemporary art.

Robert R. Williams is Professor in Germanic Studies and Religious Studies at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He was President of the Hegel Society of America (1998–2000), and has published in both philosophy and theology, with interests in continental philosophy (Husserl, Heidegger, Sartre, Foucault and Levinas) and German thought from Kant to Nietzsche, specializing in Hegel. He is author of Hegel's Ethics of Recognition (1998), Recognition: Fichte and Hegel on the Other (1992), and Schleiermacher the Theologian: The Construction of the Doctrine of God (1978), and translator and editor of Hegel's Lectures on the Philosophy of Spirit 1827/8 (2007) and I. A. Dorner: The Immutability of God (1994). He is currently completing a project on Recognition, Tragedy and the Death of God: Studies in Hegel and Nietzsche.

