

Figures

- Figure I.1 A twenty-dollar bill of credit from the first Continental dollar emission 4
- Figure I.2 A two-dollar bill of credit from the second Continental dollar emission 4
- Figure I.3 A three-dollar bill of credit from the eighth Continental dollar emission 5
- Figure I.4 A sixty-five-dollar bill of credit from the last Continental dollar emission 6
- Figure 2.1 Example of New Jersey paper money, issued December 31, 1763 25
- Figure 3.1 Percentage of units issued below the listed value 40
- Figure 4.1 Handbill issued by Congress informing the public of the design and redemption structure of the first emission of Continental dollars, circa August–October 1775 46
- Figure 7.1 Prevalent unit of account in marketplace transactions in Philadelphia, 1770–90 77
- Figure 8.1 Loan office certificate from the sixth loan office authorization, February 3, 1779 87
- Figure 9.1 Counterfactual decomposition approach to measuring moneyness value 107
- Figure 10.1 Ideal present-value path of the first two emissions of Continental dollars 116
- Figure 10.2 Ideal expected present value of a current Continental dollar: face value discounted from final redemption at 6 percent for various emissions and cumulative totals using forecast 1 124

- Figure 10.3 Ideal average expected present value of a Continental dollar currently outstanding discounted at 6 percent from final redemption dates as legislated and forecast expressed as a percentage of face value 126
- Figure 10.4 New post-1778 ideal average expected present value of a Continental dollar currently outstanding discounted at 6 percent from final redemption dates as legislated and forecast expressed as a percentage of face value and as legislated after 1778 135
- Figure 11.1 Various measures of the market value of a Continental dollar, 1776–81 138
- Figure 11.2 Cover page of Congress's 1780 depreciation table 140
- Figure 11.3 Philadelphia relative price movements masking absolute price movements due to Revolutionary War shocks 144
- Figure 11.4 Changes in the terms of trade, 1776–85 146
- Figure 11.5 Philadelphia price indices, 1775–85 148
- Figure 12.1 Time-discounting versus depreciation of the Continental dollar (1) 155
- Figure 12.2 Time-discounting versus depreciation of the Continental dollar (2) 156
- Figure 12.3 Time-discounting versus depreciation of the Continental dollar (3) 157
- Figure 14.1 A Continental-state twenty-dollar bill issued by Virginia, May 1, 1780, front and back 176
- Figure 14.2 Tax levels needed to accommodate new Continental dollar redemption legislation, 1779, 1780, and 1790 as a multiple of normal levels 191
- Figure 15.1 The Continental dollar, 1775–90: cumulative outstanding totals emitted and removed—face value 203
- Figure 15.2 Progress in total quota fulfillment by states in remitting Continental dollars, 1780–89 205
- Figure A.1 Net new Continental dollars emitted each year from 1775 through 1779 (face value)—various estimates 244
- Figure A.2 The Continental dollar: cumulative total net new emissions outstanding to date (face value), 1775–81—various estimates 245
- Figure C.1 Cumulative value of Continental dollars emitted and currently outstanding from first emission to last, 1775–80 282