

Contents

Preface ix

Introduction	Definitions and Connexions	I
	1 The idea of the book	1
	2 Why it is not about 'just war'	3
	3 jus ad bellum and jus in bello	8
	4 The jus in bello vindicated	10
	5 A word to the international lawyers	16
	6 A word to the military	22
	7 A word to my fellow-historians	27
Chapter I	The Later Enlightenment Consensus	31
	1 The publicists	32
	2 Variety within their consensus	38
	3 Fundamentals concerning war and peace	41
	4 Definitions of 'enemy'	53
	5 The laws and customs of the professionals	59
	6 The sparing of civilians	63
	7 Sea war and the neutral	67
Chapter II	First Steps in Modern War: Revolutionary, National and Popular	75
	1 The Revolution's early preoccupation with legality and humanity	77
	2 Nations in arms, first mode: France in and after 1793	84
	3 Civilians in the way of war	89
	4 Civilians as enemies	96
	5 Neutrals in the way of war	100
	6 Bombardment and destruction	108
	7 Nations in arms, second mode: partisans and national resistance	112
	8 Conventional armed forces in conventional operations	121

Chapter III	The Legislative Foundations, 1815-1914: Conscience, Codes and Compromise	128
	1 The cultural context	128
	2 The protection of combatants	147
	3 The principle of limitation and restraint	157
	4 Reprisals and military necessity	166
	5 Invasion, occupation and 'the peaceful population'	179
	6 Resistance: the limits of lawfulness	190
	7 The civilian as enemy: bombardment and destruction	200
Chapter IV	The Trials of Total War	216
	1 Soldiers and civilians	217
	2 The civilian and land war: occupation and resistance	224
	3 Sea war and the civilian	244
	4 Aerial bombardment	262
Chapter V	The Law of War in a World of Co-existences	286
	1 The post-war reconstruction, 1945-9	289
	2 The world turned upside down	301
	3 The Additional Protocols of 1977	315
	Chronological Guide	331
	Notes	333
	Bibliography	376
	Index	389