

CONTENTS

Preface and Acknowledgments xi

Introduction i

- I.1. Background to the central questions and claims i
- I.2. Methodological Issues A: resolute and therapeutic readings; “early” and “later” Wittgenstein; the “constancy” of Wittgenstein’s cultural views; the scope of the book; a point about Heidegger; a point about Charles Taylor 5
- I.3. Methodological Issues B: on the use of the Nachlass and other “nontext” sources for interpreting Wittgenstein 10
- I.4. Overview of the book 12

PART I

1. Interpreting the Tractatus 19

- 1.1. The problem of ethics and nonsense in the Tractatus 19
- 1.2. The “ineffabilist” reading of the Tractatus 21
- 1.3. Schopenhauer and the ineffabilist reading 26
- 1.4. Diamond and Conant’s resolute reading of the Tractatus 30
- 1.5. “Intention and ethics”: Early Wittgenstein and the logical positivists on the nature of ethical utterances 36

2. The Ethical Purpose of the Tractatus 42

- 2.1. A remaining task for resolute readings 42
- 2.2. Conveying intention in the context of the Tractatus 44
- 2.3. Overview of anxiety, the “they,” and authenticity in Being and Time 46
- 2.4. The Tractatus and cultural critique 50
- 2.5. The law of causality, mechanics, and “wonder at the existence of the world” 51
- 2.6. Wonder and die ganze moderne Weltanschauung 54
- 2.7. Wonder, anxiety, and authenticity 59
- 2.8. A possible problem with the relation between wonder and anxiety 62
- 2.9. Authenticity and truth in the Tractatus and Being and Time 68
- 2.10. What did Wittgenstein imagine that Heidegger meant? 71
- 2.11. A crucial difference between the ethical point of the Tractatus and authenticity in Being and Time 75
- 2.12. Kremer and Conant on the ethical point of the Tractatus 76
- 2.13. A problem with Kremer’s and Conant’s views 81
- 2.14. The ambitions of the Tractatus 85

3. A Resolute Failure 88

- 3.1. A significant difference between the Tractatus and Being and Time that points to a more significant underlying convergence 88
- 3.2. The method of the Tractatus and the essence of language 90

Conclusion to Part I 99

PART II

4. The Concept of Progress in Wittgenstein’s Thought 107

- 4.1. Introduction 107
- 4.2. Some preliminary literary-critical questions concerning the motto to the Investigations 108
- 4.3. One sense of progress in the Investigations 110
- 4.4. The relevance of the remarks on rule-following 113
- 4.5. Rule-following, progress, and the disengaged view of rationality 115

5. The Truly Apocalyptic View 125

- 5.1. Preliminary observations 125
- 5.2. Spengler's influence on Wittgenstein 127
- 5.3. Wittgenstein is not a metaphysical pessimist (or optimist) 131
- 5.4. Cultural decline and the disengaged view 134
- 5.5. Wittgenstein and religion 143
- 5.6. Wittgenstein and conservatism 148

6. The Fate of Metaphysics 151

- 6.1. Introduction 151
- 6.2. Presentation and criticism of McDowell's view 152
- 6.3. Presentation of Cavell's view 155
- 6.4. Cavell and the significance of practices in Wittgenstein 158
- 6.5. Some evidence for and against Cavell (and McDowell) 162
- 6.6. Wittgenstein and the end of metaphysics 165

Notes 171

Bibliography 231

Index 243

