

Acknowledgments

FOR advice and criticism, I owe thanks to Oscar H. Davis, Felicia L. Kaplan, Frank I. Michelman, Arthur R. Miller, and Henry J. Steiner. Of course no one is implicated with me in responsibility for the views here expressed.

David P. Griff of the Harvard Law School class of 1967 worked efficiently in helping to prepare the lectures for publication, and Catherine W. Monteiro cheerfully assumed the burden of managing the typescripts.

Lecture III, in somewhat less complete form, was first published in the May 1966 issue of the Columbia Law Review (66:831).
