

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The task of acknowledging our indebtedness to the four family agencies which have coöperated in the present study is rendered somewhat embarrassing by the fact that in a very real sense they have been not merely coöperators, but participants and colleagues. Without their full partnership the study could not have been made. It is fitting, however, that particular mention be made of the statisticians of those agencies who have been the actual coadjutors in the work. It is a pleasure, therefore, to acknowledge our very great indebtedness to the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor and to Dr. Gwendolyn H. Berry of that organization, to the Charity Organization Society and Miss Helen I. Fiske; to the Family Division of the Catholic Charities and Mrs. Alice R. Crawford; and to the Jewish Social Service Association and Miss Miriam Cohen; as well as to the interested and helpful executives of those agencies, Bailey B. Burritt, Lawson Purdy, Father Brennock, and Frances Taussig. We are also deeply appreciative of the sympathetic understanding of the objectives of the study on the part of Dr. Neva R. Deardorff, Director of the Research Bureau of the Welfare Council of New York, which has resulted in the willingness of the Council to continue the collection of statistical data inaugurated in the interest of the study, and in the provision of clerical assistance when the depression had increased the labor far beyond expectation. A further debt is due to a number of colleagues, both within the faculty and elsewhere, for critical and therefore helpful reading of the manuscript.
