

CONTENTS

Translator's Preface ix

Introduction by Leon S. Roudiez I

Prolegomenon II

Part I. The Semiotic and the Symbolic

1. The Phenomenological Subject of Enunciation 19
2. The Semiotic Chora Ordering the Drives 23
3. Husserl's Hyletic Meaning: A Natural Thesis Commanded by the Judging Subject 30
4. Hjelmslev's Presupposed Meaning 37
5. The Thetic: Rupture and/or Boundary 42
6. The Mirror and Castration Positioning the Subject as Absent from the Signifier 45

7. Frege's Notion of Signification: Enunciation and Denotation 51

8. Breaching the Thetic: Mimesis 56

9. The Unstable Symbolic Substitutions in the Symbolic: Fetishism 61

10. The Signifying Process 67

11. Poetry That is Not a Form of Murder 71

12. Genotext and Phenotext 84

13. Four Signifying Practices 88

Part II. Negativity: Rejection

14. The Fourth "Term" of the Dialectic 107

15. Independent and Subjugated "Force" in Hegel 112

16. Negativity as Transversal to Thetic Judgment 115

17. "Kinesis," "Cura," "Desire" 125

18. Humanitarian Desire 131

19. Non-Contradiction: Neutral Peace 139

20. Freud's Notion of Expulsion: Rejection 146

Part III. Heterogeneity

21. The Dichotomy and Heteronomy of Drives 167

22. Facilitation, Stasis, and the Thetic Moment 171
23. The Homological Economy of the Representamen 175
24. Through the Principle of Language 178
25. Skepticism and Nihilism in Hegel and in the Text 182

Part IV. Practice

26. Experience Is Not Practice 195
27. The Atomistic Subject of Practice in Marxism 198
28. Calling Back Rupture Within Practice:
Experience-in-Practice 202
29. The Text as Practice, Distinct from Transference Discourse 208
30. The Second Overturning of the Dialectic: After
Political Economy, Aesthetics 214
31. Maldoror and Poems: Laughter as Practice 217
32. The Expenditure of a Logical Conclusion: Igitur 226

Notes 235

Index 281

