

FIGURES

- Figure 0.1 Proportion of New York Times and Le Monde articles featuring at least one percentage figure in them since 1945 15
- Figure 1.1 Bill Dedman, a computer-assisted reporter, at his desk 28
- Figure 1.2 “The Top 38 List of Excuses Government Agencies Give for Not Being Able to Fulfill Your Data Request” 41
- Figure 1.3 “Cleaning Up Data from a File on Diskette” 41
- Figure 2.1 “America’s Best Colleges,” rankings for 1994 66
- Figure 3.1 The government activity of a French MP exposed through data, 2016 87
- Figure 5.1 Comparing daily air quality in Paris and San Francisco 143
- Figure 6.1 The investigation process initially imagined by the California Watch team 158
- Figure 6.2 Adapting the data to “real-life evidence” 167

LIST OF FIGURES

- Figure 6.3 Writing an ethical consideration into the mapping algorithm for the investigation of California schools' seismic safety 174
- Figure 7.1 Word counts for French presidential candidates' speeches shown as raw occurrences, not frequencies, 2017 192
- Figure 7.2 The infrastructure underpinning "The Weight of Words" project 197
- Figure 8.1 The Homicide Report: an interactive map and a searchable database 206
- Figure 8.2 One homicide covered in the Homicide Report in 2011 207
- Figure 8.3 Distribution of the authors who posted comments on the Homicide Report according to the number of their comments, 2010–2016 210
- Figure 8.4 Measuring agency in Homicide Report comments, 2010–2016 212
- Figure 8.5 Distribution of the number of comments received with respect to homicides on the Homicide Report, 2010–2016 214
- Figure 8.6 Radar chart comparing how superposters and nonsuperposters make sense of homicides, 2010–2016 217
- Figure 8.7 Radar chart showing how occasional posters make sense of homicides involving police officers, 2010–2016 221
- Figure 8.8 Radar chart showing how occasional posters make sense of homicides before and after their interaction with superposters, 2010–2016 225
- Figure 8.9 Title and title-page photograph of "South Vermont Avenue: L.A. County's 'Death Alley,'" 2014 226
- Figure 8.10 Graph locating the homicides committed on Vermont Avenue since 2007 227