

CONTENTS

	PAGE
PREFACE	7
INTRODUCTION by DR. FRIEDRICH HIRTH	13
CHAPTER I
CHINESE PHILANTHROPY, IN THOUGHT AND PRACTICE
The study of philanthropy	15
I. Philanthropy in Chinese Thought
Philanthropy as a virtue	16
Philanthropy, natural to man	16
Acquirement and development of philanthropy	17
The state and philanthropy	19
The goal of state philanthropy	19
Opposition to philanthropy	20
Philanthropy unnatural to man	21
Conclusion	23
II. Chinese Philanthropy in Practice
Historical notices	23
Ancient old-age pensions	23
Poor-relief	24
The beginnings of institutional charity and social legislation	24
The poor law of China	26
Ineffectiveness of the law	26
Legal status of popular philanthropic institutions	27
Relative efficiency of state and popular control	28
Present organization of philanthropy in China	28
Scope and character of Chinese philanthropy	29
CHAPTER II
POPULATION AND SOCIAL WELL-BEING
Incipient poverty and its chief cause	31
The population of China	32
Causes of density	33
Present causes of prolific reproduction	34
1. Rural conditions	34
2. Ancestor worship	34
3. Early marriage	35
Effects of surplus population	35
Equilibration between population and means of subsistence: four aspects	35
1. Population and tillage of the soil	35

	PAGE
2. Population and migrations	37
3. Population and plane of living	38
4. Population and physical energies	39
Regulation of population	40
Indirect methods	40
Direct methods	41

CHAPTER III

CHARITY

Causes of dependence	42
The care of the poor	42
Present stage of charity in China	43

I. Care of Aged Men

Attitude toward the aged	43
Public institutions	44
Home aid	45
Home for the aged	45
A monastic house for the aged	46

II. Care of Aged Women and Widows

Status of woman and civilization	48
Woman in early times	48
Widowhood	49
Status of woman in China	49
Widowhood in China	50
Honor for female virtue	51
Public aid	52
House of Pure Widowhood	53
Concluding remarks	56

III. Care of Dependent Children

Desertion of infants	57
Public care of dependent children	59
Home aid	59
The placing-out system	60
Adoption of foundlings	62
Administration	63
Finances	63
State encouragement	65
Institutional care	66
Modern methods	66

IV. Care of the Destitute Sick

Public health	67
Public responsibility	68

	PAGE
The free dispensary	69
Asylum for the sick	69
Isolation of the diseased	70
Care of defectives	70
Free burial	72
The need of a national health campaign	72

CHAPTER IV

MUTUAL BENEFIT

Mutual benefit and social consciousness	74
The value of mutuality	75

I. The Clan Organisation

What it is	75
Localization	76
The social value of clan organization	76
Clan charities	78
The Van Clan estate	79
Objects	80
Administration	80
Distribution of aid	81
Special grants	82
Conclusion	83

II. The Village Community

Local spirit	83
The village government	84
Village charities	85
Mutual loan societies	85
Mutual providential associations	86

III. Provincial and District Clubs

The basis of association	87
Functions of the clubs: social and charitable	88

IV. Trade and Crafts Guilds

The basis of association	89
Functions of the guilds: trade and charity	90
Voluntary assessment for charitable purposes	91
Conclusion	92

CHAPTER V

CIVIC BETTERMENT

Philanthropy as promotion of social welfare	93
The Chinese government, in theory and in practice	94
The district municipality	95

	PAGE
Paternalism	95
Defects in administration	96
State neglect	97
Practical democracy	97
Popular co-operative undertakings	98
I. Free Educational Opportunities
Government education	98
Free charity schools	99
Public lectures	99
Literary censorship	100
II. Public Safety and Protection
The life-saving association at Wuhu	101
Life boats	102
Management and finances	103
The red boats of Ichang	105
Fire protection	106
III. Free Public Service
Roads, lights, bridges	107
Free ferry service	107
IV. Municipal Self-government by the People
Its evolution	108
The case of the Newchwang Guild	109
Local self-government, a growing movement	110
The new political régime	111

CHAPTER VI

CONCLUSION : RISE OF NATIONAL SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS AND SOLIDARITY

Chinese philanthropy, a product of national genius	113
Its democratic foundation	113
Esprit de corps of minor social groups	113
Absence of national consciousness in the past	113
Poor internal communication	114
Geographical isolation and absence of conflict	114
Governmental decentralization	114
The new national consciousness and solidarity	116
International relationships	116
Improved internal communication	116
The new education	117
The nation-wide basis of philanthropy	118
A new national personality	119
BIBLIOGRAPHY	121
VITA	123