

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

TO PROFESSOR O. J. Campbell and Dr. Henry W. Wells of the Department of English, to Professor Ralph Marcus of the Department of Oriental Languages, of Columbia University, and to Miss Matilda L. Berg of the Columbia University Press, I am deeply grateful for their interest in this work, and the valuable suggestions contributed by them. To my friends Dr. William Nelson and Miss Eleanor Rosenberg I owe a debt of a more personal nature than I can here properly acknowledge. Above all my thanks are due to Professor Jefferson Butler Fletcher, whose wisdom, urbanity, and kindness have been to me, as to all those who have enjoyed the privilege of working with him, an unflinching source of inspiration and refreshment.

M. J. V.

NEW YORK CITY

SEPTEMBER, 1939

