

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Long in formation—with enough false starts and delays to have made even Jack Smith sit up and take notice—the idea for a book on Flaming Creatures goes back at least ten years, and some thanks are now in order.

First, thanks to Cultographies series founding editors Ernest Mathijs and Jamie Sexton for initially inviting me to contribute to the series, to Wallflower Press commissioning editor Yoram Allon for contracting the work, and to Ryan Groendyk and his team at Columbia University Press for taking over and seeing the book through to its completion.

My thanks also go to Ann Restak and Miciah Hussey at the Gladstone Gallery in New York for the assistance they provided while I was conducting preliminary research at the Jack Smith Archive in April 2010.

Thanks also to Ernest Mathijs, Nicholas Rombes, and Janet Staiger for providing feedback on the initial book proposal and more recently to my friends and colleagues—Adrian Danks, Claire Perkins, Dana Polan, Iain Smith, and Deane Williams—for looking over full drafts and providing valuable suggestions, many of which have found their way into the final document. Thanks, similarly, to Columbia University Press's two anonymous readers for helpful comments that contributed to the shape and detail of the work.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Finally, this book—which is for “creatures” everywhere—is dedicated to Zoi and Mia.

May you rage and flame.