Acknowledgments

This project reflects the work of many authors, both those listed formally and others who helped behind the scenes. Collectively, we would like to thank the external reviewers as well as the University of Texas Press for their enthusiastic help in constructing this volume, especially Robert Devens, Sarah McGavick, and Lynne Chapman, and series editor Andrew Dillon at the University of Texas, who with a light hand nurtured this project as it grew. Many thanks also to freelance copyeditor Tana Silva, indexer Lisa Rivero, and proofreader Melissa McGee Tullos for their outstanding work.

In addition, Brian is grateful for the ongoing patience and support of his family, including Jessica, Gavin, and Ellerie. Emily would like to thank her family and coeditors. Laura thanks her family and friends for their encouragement and uncanny ability to know perfectly just when to share a joke, a walk, a sandwich—and especially their time. We would also like to thank all who have contributed to our understanding of misinformation. Finally, we thank those who are reading these pages for your interest in joining this conversation.

THIS PAGE INTENTIONALLY LEFT BLANK

Misinformation and Mass Audiences

THIS PAGE INTENTIONALLY LEFT BLANK