

Acknowledgments

I wish to thank the many institutions and individuals who supported me financially, intellectually, and emotionally as I wrote this book. When the research began it was supported by Princeton University, the American Research Center in Egypt, and a US Department of Education Foreign Languages and Area Scholarship (FLAS) fellowship. Later research and writing was undertaken with funding from Macquarie University and an Australian Research Council Discovery Project grant (DP120103974). In addition to Macquarie University, I also wish to thank Yale University, the American University in Cairo, and the University of Sydney for providing me with institutional homes during my sabbaticals, which gave me the space and intellectual inspiration to write this book. Jim Burr at the University of Texas Press has been enthusiastic about this project from the beginning, and I am really grateful for his support.

I gained valuable feedback on portions of this manuscript during invited seminars I gave at the Australian National University, Oxford University, Princeton University, Tufts University, the University of Auckland, the University of Exeter, the University of Sydney, and Yale University. I thank them all for hosting me and for their intellectual engagement. Members of the Sydney Women's Anthropology Group (SWAG), including Gillian Cowlshaw, Holly High, Vivienne Kondos, Alison Leitch, Rozanna Lilley, Diane Losche, Jeannie Martin, Yasmine Musharbash, Kalpana Ram, Cristina Rochas, and Rosemary Wiss, gave me valuable critical insight and support during the writing process. I thank them all, and I mourn Vivienne and Jeannie.

A host of individuals all over the world either read early drafts of chapters or the entire manuscript, provided stimulating intellectual conversation that helped me take my writing and thinking in productive and new directions, provided emotional support, or told me what I was doing was rubbish and thus helped me figure out how to improve.
