

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Even a book authored by a single individual is the product of tremendous collaboration and support. I particularly wish to acknowledge the love and guidance which my dear mother, Mollie Pearlstein, has provided throughout my life. My wife, Pamela, has been a tower of patience, strength, and intuitive wisdom throughout our more than ten years together. I also extend my love to my brother, Robert, to my sister, Elaine Wolman, and to my sister-in-law, Emily.

The person who certainly made the greatest contributions to this book is Theresa J. May, Assistant Director and Editor-in-Chief of the University of Texas Press. Theresa May's faith, patience, and support during the long process of making this work a reality are a model for every professional and have earned my deepest and most heartfelt thanks. In addition, the kind assistance and support of Allison M. Faust, Associate Editor at the University of Texas Press, are greatly appreciated.

I also wish to express deep gratitude to my great friends Robert and Barbara Eichorn. Robert, a retired U.S. Navy commander, read the first manuscript draft; his invaluable comments are sincerely appreciated. I also wish to thank three of my colleagues, all of Southeastern Oklahoma State University. They are Dr. Muhammad K. Betz, who offered valuable suggestions on Chapter Five; Dr. Sauri P. Bhattacharya, who was an early reader of Chapter Four; and Dr. John R. Wright, who read and made key suggestions on Chapter Six.

Many of my colleagues at Southeastern Oklahoma State University have been enormously supportive of my work over the years and deserve special mention. I particularly wish to salute Professor Bruce A. Johnson, Dr. L. David Norris, and my colleague and department chair, Dr. Kenneth Chinn, all of Southeastern's Department of Social Sciences. The longtime support of our dean, Dr. C. W. Mangrum; Southeastern's associate vice president for academic affairs, Dr. Douglas McMillan; our vice president for academic affairs, Dr. Jesse O. Snowden; and the president of Southeastern Oklahoma State University, Dr. Glen D. Johnson, are also greatly appreciated. My students, in particular Preston Harbuck and Thomas Gray, have also provided me with invaluable feedback on how to make this book a more useful text. Thank you all.

Some of us are profoundly fortunate to have had wonderful mentors over the years. I am particularly grateful for my association with Dr. Lawrence Zelic Freedman, M.D., of the University of Chicago and the Institute of Social and Behavioral Pathology; Dr. J. Garry Clifford of the University of Connecticut; and Dr. Lewis Lipsitz and the late Dr. Paul F. Kress of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Lastly, I shall never forget the intellectual influence of both the late Dr. William C. Hartel and the late Professor Robert H. Deets of Marietta College.

The staffs of many university libraries have been extremely helpful over the years. The respective staffs of Harvard University's Widener Library and various libraries at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Tufts University's Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Stanford University, and the University of California at Berkeley deserve special mention. I also wish to thank Jeffrey Levy of the main library at the University of North Texas for his last-minute bibliographical assistance.
