This book would have been impossible without the constant support of my family. I am especially grateful to them for looking after my children while I was working on the last stages of it. My friend Dr. Pauline Homsy Vinson has been very generous with her time in commenting and making valuable suggestions. I owe her a debt of gratitude. Thanks are also due to my professors, Dr. Elizabeth Boa and Dave Murray of the University of Nottingham, who supervised my Ph.D. dissertation, the original manuscript of this book. I thank the great poet Adonis for inspiring me and Dr. Nawal el-Saadawi for her generosity in responding to my questions. Special thanks to my friend Dr. Ahmad al-Issa, at the American University of Sharjah, for believing in me. I am grateful to Frances Fawkes for her suggestions and for proofreading the manuscript. I must also thank my friend Dr. Kate McKafferty for her encouragement. The librarians at both the University of Nottingham and the American University of Sharjah were very helpful. My thanks to them all. Last but not least, I thank the University of Texas Press, in particular Jim Burr, the humanities editor, for publishing this book.
