

Acknowledgments

The editors would like to thank the contributors to the book for participating in the First Biennial Virginia Garrett Lectures on the History of Cartography in October 1998 and revising their lectures for publication in this volume. Special thanks goes to Richard Francaviglia, our colleague at the University of Texas at Arlington and director of the Center for Greater Southwestern Studies and the History of Cartography, for his hard work in building programs that link the holdings of the UTA Libraries' rich Special Collections to the curriculum and the interests of the general public. Sally Gross, now retired and living in Tennessee, was a great help in coordinating the staff and resources of Special Collections to make the first lectures and this publication happen.

Betty Wood, a secretary at UTA, deserves special mention for her work in preparing the manuscript in what seemed like never-ending revisions. Betty's good cheer and upbeat personality never let the work affect her positive attitude. Another hearty thank-you goes to Kit Goodwin, cartographic archivist in Special Collections, for her untiring efforts on behalf of the Garrett Lectures, this volume, and all things cartographic. Kit, more than anyone else, has come to symbolize UTA's commitment to the studying, collecting, and promoting of cartographic history. Ann Hodges, current coordinator for Special Collections, has enthusiastically worked on behalf of the lectures, as has Tom Wilding, director of libraries at UTA.

Our wives, Judy Reinhartz and Janis Saxon, lent love, support, and understanding to us during our time away from home working on this book. Finally, Jenkins and Virginia Garrett have made the book possible through their zealous support of UTA and its efforts to promote historical cartography to a wide audience.
