

Contents

Introduction by Naomi Lindstrom ix

Translator's Note xv

Iphigenia 1

FIRST PART *A Very Long Letter Wherein Things Are Told As
They Are in Novels* 5

SECOND PART Juliet's Balcony 91

CHAPTER I *Having now sent the interminable letter to her friend
Cristina, María Eugenia Alonso resolves to write her diary. As will be seen, in this first chapter, the genteel Mercedes Galindo appears at last.* 93

CHAPTER II Wherein María Eugenia Alonso describes the quiet times spent in the corral at her house and wherein Gabriel Olmedo also appears. 101

CHAPTER III How a wandering attention unleashes a dreadful storm, which in turn precipitates great events. 113

CHAPTER IV In which she waits, and she waits, conversing with an acacia branch and a few flowering vines of bougainvillaea. 156

CHAPTER V	Here, María Eugenia Alonso, sitting on a large rock, confesses to the river; the river gives her advice, and she, obediently and piously, decides to follow the advice exactly.	164
CHAPTER VI	Rain, a letter, and an afternoon that, like a road, glides, winds, and is lost in the past.	182
CHAPTER VII	Supremum Vale!	204
THIRD PART	Toward the Port of Aulis	209
CHAPTER I	After long months of deep sleep, one morning, from the depths of a wardrobe, lying among ribbons, lace, and old fabric, María Eugenia Alonso's literary verbosity has suddenly awakened. Here it is still rubbing its eyes.	211
CHAPTER II	After sailing for three days in the caravel of her own experience, María Eugenia Alonso has just made a very important discovery.	247
FOURTH PART	Iphigenia	261
CHAPTER I	In the early hours of a Monday	263
CHAPTER II	Early Tuesday morning	267
CHAPTER III	Wednesday noon	272
CHAPTER IV	From Wednesday night to Thursday	285
CHAPTER V	Thursday night to Friday	293
CHAPTER VI	Early Saturday morning	301
CHAPTER VII	The same Saturday at midnight	312
CHAPTER VIII	Gabriel's letter	318
CHAPTER IX	The following Monday at nightfall	328