

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I WANT TO particularly thank Theresa May of the University of Texas Press for her enthusiastic support of my project and her professional advice. I want to also thank the staff at the press that worked on different aspects of the book. The University of Texas Press is to be congratulated for its commitment to Chicano history, and I am honored to be publishing my second book with the press.

Thanks also to those who read the manuscript for the press, including Richard Griswold del Castillo, a pioneering historian of the Chicano experience. I appreciate their professional and constructive comments.

There are many others who in one way or another inspired, advised, or assisted me in imagining, plotting, researching, and organizing this book. They include, in no particular order, Gaston Espinosa, Luis León, Darryl Catherine, Richard Hecht, Jim Viegh, Magdalena Torres, Tom Chávez, Orlando Romero, Tomás Jaehn, Hazel Romero, César Caballero, Salvador Guarena, Ed Fields, Gilda Baeza, Mary Sarbor, Carmen Sacomani, Gerald Poyo, Brother Ed, Fr. Luis Quihuis, Camilo Cruz, Fr. Mike Kennedy, SJ, Henry Olivares and the Olivares family, Lydia López, Fr. Richard Estrada, CMF, Patricia Krommer, Mary Brent Wehrli, Mario Rivas, Arturo López, Fr. Virgilio Elizondo, Tim Matovina, Raul Ruiz, Pedro Arias, Fr. Juan Romero, Fr. Steve Niskanen, CMF, the students in Fr. Virgilio Elizondo's classes at UCSB, Corine García, Monica García, Colleen Ho, Simon Elliott, Randy Lamb, and Maura Jess.

I want to acknowledge in addition the influence of Fr. Virgilio Elizondo, who encouraged me to pursue research in Chicano Catholic history. His friendship over the years has been a great comfort and joy.

As I do in my introduction but wish to do here as well, I want to thank Professor Gaston Espinosa, who as a graduate student at UCSB working with me provided the spark that moved me in the direction of researching the role of religion in the Chicano experience.

I want to also express my gratitude to funding sources that assisted me in my research. These include the University of California, Santa Barbara (UCSB) Academic Senate, UC Mexus, and the Center for Chicano Studies at UCSB.

Research facilities that aided me include the Fray Angélico Chávez History Library of the Museum of New Mexico; the Southwest Collection at the El Paso Public Library; Special Collections at the University of Texas at El Paso; the Benson Latin American Library at the University of Texas at Austin; the Catholic Archives of the Archdiocese of San Antonio; the Department of Archives and Manuscripts of The Catholic University of America; Special Collections at the UCSB Davidson Library; Special Collections in the Charles E. Young Research Library at UCLA.

As always, I thank my wife and companion, Professor Ellen McCracken, for her love and support. Her discovery of the work of Fray Angélico Chávez influenced my work on him and helped inspire my imagination of this larger project.

Of course, I want to acknowledge my two children, Giuliana and Carlo, who for years lived with their parents' research and, in particular, their various research trips, especially to Santa Fe. I hope they learned something from this experience about their parents' work and how these family excursions helped bind us together as a family. I hope they never forget these memories.

Finally, I dedicate this book to my mother, Alma García Araiza. She has influenced and encouraged me since birth. Like Pop, Nama, and Tanaca, my mother will always be in my heart and soul.
