

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book, and the Markle Commission Report that preceded it, are products of the John and Mary R. Markle Foundation's multi-sided program in media and political participation. Markle Foundation President Lloyd N. Morrisett and Program Officer Edith C. Bjornson combined to provide extraordinarily gracious support and encouragement at every stage of this project's development, a fact I gratefully acknowledge here.

Others deserve thanks for their valuable contributions to the data collection stage of the project: Louis Harris, Ron Bass, and Ventura DiRocco of the Louis Harris and Associates organization, Bernie Richstatter and Wally Christofferson of the Luce Press Clipping Service, and Brooks Clapp and Mark Rovner, formerly of the Roosevelt Center for Public Policy Research.

Several scholars offered useful advice and/or helpfully criticized the early draft chapters. They include James David Barber of Duke University, Wayne Danielson and Roderick P. Hart of the University of Texas, Helmut Norpoth of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, and Doris Graber of the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle. Two political scientists reviewed the entire manuscript at the invitation of the University of Texas Press and made critical suggestions that improved the final manuscript. The staff at the Press helped make the experience of fashioning this large project into a book an enjoyable one. And Suzanne Colwell of the University of Texas Government Department skilfully produced the final manuscript.

None of the good people who helped me can be held responsible for the flaws and omissions that remain. Though much of any praise is deservedly theirs, the blame is mine alone.
