“Seek, and ye shall find!” This ancient admonition is most applicable to the historian engaged in editing a manuscript for publication. The success of the search for information, in many instances, rests exclusively on the help rendered by others. By such generous and selfless acts, editorial puzzles find solutions: small or large, that assistance adds its measure to the finished work. I wish to express to the following my debt of gratitude and appreciation for their efforts.

For special searches, I am grateful to Willard E. Ireland, Provincial Librarian and Archivist, Victoria, British Columbia, who furnished me with several answers and pertinent extracts from the Victoria Gazette. Miss Mary K. Dempsey, Assistant Librarian, Historical Society of Montana, not only solved three dilemmas for me, but also helped procure appropriate scenes portraying Montana during Reinhart’s labors there. Mr. J. M. Brown of The Oregonian, Portland, gave ready response to my requests for photostats from his newspaper files (where needed), as did Robert D. Young of The Oregon Journal. Miss Priscilla Knuth, Research Associate, Oregon Historical Society, graciously replied to a query with the available information.

Mr. Herman J. Hogensen, City Recorder, Salt Lake City, solved research conflicts by his ready and full response to a query concerning 1868 law enforcement officials in his city; as did Lauritz G. Petersen, Assistant Librarian, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Office of the Church Historian, on several biographical matters. Mr. Guy L. Robins, Millard County Clerk, likewise readily gave attention to my quest for the name of that County’s 1868 Sheriff. Dr. A. R. Mortensen, formerly Director of the Utah Historical Society (now Director of the University of Utah Press), and John James, Jr., the Society Librarian, graciously provided information that made possible a more articulate editing of Reinhart's stay in Utah, 1867–1868.

Miss Hazel B. Rider, Secretary, Siskiyou County Historical Society, rendered service to two queries placed in her hands, besides making available an 1851 Yreka reproduction. Mr. F. Hal Higgins, Davis, California, responded quickly with information pertinent to a singular editorial problem. And, Mr. Ernest P. Mauk, Los Angeles Valley College, shared his theater library and knowledge with me in solving several identifications for theater personalities mentioned by Reinhart.

To these thoughtful and cooperative people, my thanks.

A special appreciative debt is owed to the Henry E. Huntington Library staff for their never failing smiles, quiet suggestions, and assistance during my work there these past months. The facilities of the Bancroft Library, University of California, Berkeley, provided several solutions on a brief visit, made more profitable and enjoyable by their quick response to my needs. Particularly, I wish to express my long standing debt to Dale L. Morgan of that staff for his never failing kindness, encouragement, and rich knowledge of the West. He provided answers to several difficult problems which confronted me.

James DeT. Abajian, Librarian, California Historical Society, rendered immeasurable assistance by compiling index cards from the Reinhart manuscript to search through his extensive and valuable information-card file, one of the real treasures of the Society's library. For that effort, above the call of our friendship, I am deeply grateful.

Lastly, I wish to thank Mrs. Laurel Allen for providing me with a final typed draft, and to Mrs. Elizabeth I. Dixon, Librarian, University of California at Los Angeles, for her generous assistance in helping to proofread the galleys.
