

Contents

Foreword by E. Bradford Burns	vii
Preface	xvii
Introduction: Political Psychology and the Brazilians
1. National Characteristics	5
2. National Aspirations and Political Parties	12
3. Personalities and Power	26
Part I. National Characteristics
4. National Characteristics	35
5. Brazil as Seen by Foreigners	44
6. General Traditions and Present-Day Characteristics	53
7. Traditional Positive Characteristics	60
8. Present-Day Positive Characteristics	61
9. Traditional and Present-Day Negative Characteristics	62
10. Conclusion	65
Part II: National Aspirations
11. Introduction	69
12. Independence and Sovereignty	71
13. Territorial Integrity	74
14. Effective Occupation of the Land	76
15. National Unity	81
16. National Equilibrium and Regionalism	83
17. Communications and National Unity	88
18. Psychosocial Integration	90
19. Miscegnation and Racial Tolerance	92
20. Acculturation and Nationalization of Immigrants	94
21. Classes and Social Justice	101
22. Representative Government and Harmonious Division of Powers	105
23. Oligarchy and Democracy	110
24. Centralization and Federation	115
25. Economic Development and Well-Being	119
26. Education	129
27. Health	140

Part III: The Permanent and the Transitory: A Summing Up
28. The Permanent and the Transitory: A Summing Up	147
Bibliography
Introduction: Political Psychology and the Brazilians	159
Part I: National Characteristics	160
Brazilian Writers	160
Foreign Travelers	163
Other Works Cited	165
Part II: National Aspirations	166
Part III: The Permanent and The Transitory: A Summing Up	172
Index	173