My surveying and mapping at Inka settlements took place in 1986 and the first part of 1987. It was sponsored in the United States by the Institute of Andean Research, New York City. I thank its president, Dr. John V. Murra, and secretary, Dr. Craig Morris, for their support of the project and efforts on its behalf. Paul Beelitz, the institute's administrator, managed bureaucratic tasks with concern and efficiency.

My fieldwork was funded by grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, a federal agency which supports the study of such fields as history, philosophy, literature, languages, and archaeology; the Stella and Charles Guttman Foundation, Inc.; Dr. C. A. Tripp; and Mr. Leon Pomerance.

In South America numerous scholars and students accompanied me to the field and provided a base for my survey. In Argentina, Dr. Juan Schobinger extended great hospitality and facilitated the trip to La Rioja Province for the Chilecito survey. Prof. J. Roberto Bárcena made possible a return excursion to Ranchillos in Mendoza. Through Dr. Schobinger's initiative, it was possible to organize the expedition to Nevados de Aconquija. Mr. Antonio Beorchia and Prof. Bárcena also accompanied that expedition, contributing much to its success. Our estimable guide on that journey was Mr. Juan Carlos Reales.

I thank archaeologist Víctor Núñez Regueiro, director of the Institute of Archaeology of the National University of Tucumán, for providing me with a base from which I was able to visit sites in Catamarca province. Prof. Eduardo Arias, also of the institute, was most helpful with local arrangements and I thank him for accompanying Dr. Alberto Rex González and me on a field trip to the Santa María and Vallecito areas. I thank Rex González for stimulating conversations concerning Inka and Argentine archaeology. Mr. Mario Guerra was my excellent assistant on one lengthy trip into Catamarca.

My gratitude is extended to Mr. Pío "Pibe" Pablo Díaz, director of the Archaeological Museum of Cachi, Salta Province. Pibe not only made possible a return to the sites La Paya, Cortaderas, and Potrero de Payogasta, but took valuable time to accompany me to the Quebrada de Humahuaca in Jujuy Province to inspect several other settlements.

In Bolivia I am grateful to Mr. Edmundo Claure, the archaeologist of Samaipata, for the time and concern he invested in my visit. In Cochabamba, I owe much to the archaeologists of the university's Archaeological Museum, Mr. David Pereira and Mr. Ramón Sanzetenea, who made possible a return to Incallacta.

Gratitude is extended to Dr. Ramiro Matos of Lima, Peru, who was most generous in sharing his ideas and information about Pumpu and arranging for me to visit the site. I thank Mr. Alfredo Altamirano for assisting my activities at Pumpu and for doing the ink renderings of several of the plans published here. I am grateful to Mr. Elias Mujica of Lima, who accompanied me to the department of Puno, where we visited Pucará and returned to Chucuito to record map data.

In Ecuador I wish to acknowledge the help and advice of Dr. Antonio Fresco, director of research of the Archaeological Museum of the Central Bank of Ecuador. He arranged for students to accompany me to the sites Callo and Pambamarca. In Cuenca I was pleased to visit Dr. Jaime Idrovo and Mr. Jorge Guaman, who were generous with their time and ideas concerning the remarkable Tomebamba excavations.

Conversations with numerous other scholars in the Andes aided in the development of my ideas about Inka settlement planning. I thank Chileans Mr. Hans Niemeyer, Mr. Carlos Aldunate, Mr. Rubén Stehberg, and Dr. Mario Rivera. Argentine scholars who have stimulated my thinking are Dr. Ana María Lorandi, Dr. Rodolfo Raffino, and Mrs. Teresa Piossek Prebisch. In Bolivia I thank Dr. Hernando Sanabria Fernández, Dr. Hugo Daniel Ruiz, and Mr. Oswaldo Rivera Sundt. Several Peruvian scholars have aided me considerably with problems addressed in this book. I particularly thank Dr. Luis Guillermo Lumbreras, Dr. María Rostworowski de Diez Canseco, and Mr. Santiago Agurto Calvo.

I am most grateful to N.E.H. for the grant that enabled me to prepare this manuscript. Ms. Elizabeth Arndt supervised the grant with efficiency and concern. Work began on the manuscript in April 1987, and was concluded in June 1988. The Institute of Andean Research was able to supply additional stipend funds from a donation by Mr. Leon Pomerance. A donation from Dr. C. A. Tripp was used to cover photographic, copying, drafting, and editing expenses. Dr. Tripp also donated computer and printer facilities and supplied valuable computer advice.

During the writing of the manuscript, I frequently used the facilities of the New York Public Library, which I thank for its customary fine service. I also thank the Bobst Library of New York University, which was often useful. Dr. Craig Morris of the American Museum of Natural History kindly made available the collections of Adolph Bandelier paintings and drawings and the Shippee Johnson photographs. I wish to thank Mr. Edward Franquemont for data and observations about the stones of Chinchero. Mr. Alfredo Altamirano drafted figures 3.3, 3.8, 3.9, 3.10, 3.23, 5.8, 6.22, 6.26, and 7.13. Mr. Edward Bahnimptewa drafted figures 1.2, 1.3, 2.3, 2.14, and 6.8. Mr. Delfin Zúñiga drafted figures 5.7, 7.10, and 7.18. I am grateful to Dr. Anthony Aveni for comments on chapter 8. The interest shown in this project by Dr. R. Tom Zuidema has been most gratifying.

I was most fortunate to acquire the deft editing services of Ms. Adriana von Hagen, who did much to polish the rough draft of this book. I also thank my parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hyslop, for proofreading. Special gratitude goes to Dr. Fritz Fluckiger, who not only proofread the manuscript with great care, but made useful organizational suggestions. Although the research and ideas of many people are integrated into this book, I assume final responsibility for its content.
