

Acknowledgments

Let me begin by thanking the Film Scholars Program, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, for generously supporting my work. Sid Ganis, past President of the Academy, was welcoming and helpful; he even gave me an interview about his work at Fox in New York. To the Institutional Grants Committee and Andrew Marlowe, chair of the Committee, my profound thanks. Shawn Guthrie handled administrative matters, large and small. As I quickly learned, a Scholars Award carries a good bit of prestige!

Warmest thanks to the many individuals and institutions that assisted me. Thomas Leitch and Joanna Rapf, my readers and peer reviewers, did an excellent job of pinpointing the manuscript's strengths and weaknesses. Lawrence Suid shared his research materials and his encyclopedic knowledge of the Hollywood war film. Barbara Hall of the Margaret Herrick Library, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, guided me through the many treasures of the Special Collections department. Ned Comstock, archivist at the USC Cinematic Arts Library, was, like Barbara, uncannily able to anticipate my needs. Robert Shandley of Texas A & M and Rebecca Prime of Hood College invited me to their institutions to lecture on Fox. At Towson University, Barry Moore, Greg Faller, Dave Reiss, Maravene Loeschke, Kit Spicer, Robert Caret, Richard Vatz, and the Faculty Research Committee strongly supported my work.

Thanks to Jim Burr, my editor at University of Texas Press, for his consistent support and encouragement. Thanks also to copyeditor Jennifer Dropkin, managing editor Leslie Tingle, and the entire staff at University of Texas Press.

And from West to East, let me thank the following.

In Palo Alto, California: Department of Special Collections, Stanford University Libraries.

In Los Angeles: Don and Sue Silver, Rush White, Nicholas Cull, Margaret Herrick Library, UCLA Performing Arts Special Collections, UCLA

Special Collections, USC Cinematic Arts Library, AFI Library, and Larry Edmonds Bookstore.

In Lawrence, Kansas: John C. Tibbetts.

In Madison, Wisconsin: Wisconsin Center for Film and Theater Research.

In Athens, Ohio: Doug McCabe and Ohio University Archives and Special Collections.

In Washington, DC: John Buchtel, Scott Taylor, David Hagen, Georgetown University Special Collections, and the Motion Picture Reading Room, Library of Congress.

In Baltimore: Steve Libowitz, Gary Harner, Albert S. Cook Library at Towson University, Milton Eisenhower Library at Johns Hopkins University, and Loyola–Notre Dame University Library.

In Salisbury, Maryland: Jim Welsh, Elsie Walker, Dave Johnson, Brenda Grodzicki, and Literature/Film Quarterly.

In New York City: Liz Kurtulik, Art Resource, and the New York Public Library.

In Groton, Massachusetts: William Quigley and Quigley Publishing.

In Bath, UK: Brian Neve.

An earlier version of my section on The Longest Day in Chapter 5 was published in Literature/Film Quarterly as Peter Lev, “Filming The Longest Day: Conflicting Interests,” Literature/Film Quarterly 33, no. 4 (2005): 63–69, and is reprinted with permission.

Thanks to my family for motivating and inspiring me over the last several years. Without family it would be hard to get up in the morning, let alone write a book. Yvonne Lev, Sara Lev, Mike Sloan, and darling Evie Sloan (born 2011): Thank you!

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX

THIS PAGE INTENTIONALLY LEFT BLANK