
Acknowledgments

*I*t would be impossible to tackle such a project as this alone. I am grateful to my sponsoring editor, Shannon Davies, for her endless patience and her expert guidance. Without her constant words of encouragement this work would never have seen the light of day.

My husband, Harold, provided unwavering support and constructive criticism through his numerous readings of the manuscript.

My splendid, devoted friend Sharlande Sledge donned her English-teacher hat and read and proofread the final draft with red pen in hand.

Ellie Womack was extremely helpful, especially while I was writing the chapter on hummingbird banding. She and I e-mailed the pages back and forth to each other many times until I finally got it right.

Nancy Newfield provided needed information and gave encouragement, and she allowed me to hold in my hands and release one of the rubythroats she banded at the “Hummer/Bird Celebration!” in Rockport-Fulton, Texas.

I am indebted to Janet Sheets, who retrieved documents both in the scientific field and in the popular literature from the archives of Moody Library, Baylor University, in Waco.

Last, but by no means least, I owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to photographers Curtis E. Williams, Luke Wade, Barbara Garland, Beth K. Hawkins, and Alan Murphy for the brilliant images they contributed to make this book a work of art.

“Little birds . . . so different from ours it is a marvel.”

Christopher Columbus, October 21, 1492