

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Thanks are due to many people. I could not have completed this project without their encouragement and critiques.

Regent University in Virginia Beach has been a constant source of support. This book is based on my dissertation from Regent. There I had the privilege of working with Michael Graves as an advisor. He embodies a scholar and a gentle teacher. His encouragement and insights enabled me to pursue this subject with enthusiasm. Dennis Bounds, Rodney Reynolds, and Kathy Merlock Jackson provided helpful references, suggestions, and clarifications. These contributions make the scholarly endeavor a rich experience.

Maureen and Paul Flanagan made my studies at Regent University possible by providing unlimited hospitality and friendship.

I would also like to acknowledge the support and challenges of colleagues both at Regent and at Trinity Christian College. These colleagues often acted as sounding boards and helped me over difficult hurdles. Trinity Christian College provided me the peace of an office and has supported me in this process.

Finally, I want to thank my husband, Mark Ward, who willingly made time to read each chapter and give insight and kind criticism. I could not have done this without him.
