

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Notes on Romanization and Translation	xiii
Introduction: Minjung, History, and Historical Subjectivity	1
Part I. The Crisis of Historical Subjectivity	21
1. The Construction of Minjung	23
2. Anticommunism and North Korea	70
3. Anti-Americanism and Chuch'e Sasang	109
Part II. Building a Counterpublic Sphere	145
4. The Undongkwön as a Counterpublic Sphere	147
5. Between Indeterminacy and Radical Critique: Madanggük, Ritual, and Protest	187
6. The Alliance between Labor and Intellectuals	213
Part III. The Politics of Representation	241
7. "To Be Reborn as Revolutionary Workers": Gramscian Fusion and Leninist Vanguardism	243
8. The Subject as the Subjected: Intellectuals and Workers in Labor Literature	269
Conclusion: The Minjung Movement as History	294
Bibliography	305
Index	339

