ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I am most grateful to Phạm Thu Thủy of the Department of Political and Social Change, Australian National University. From 2003 through 2009, she collected and organized many of the materials I used to write this book. Grants from the Australian Research Council during that period paid part of her salary and for some other aspects of my research. Also vital to this book's genesis was collegial, academic, and financial support from the Australian National University, particularly its Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies and Department of Political and Social Change.

The Trung Tâm Nghiên Cứu Việt Nam và Giao Lưu Văn Hóa [Center for Vietnamese Studies and Cultural Exchange] and the Viện Việt Nam Học và Khoa Học Phát Triển [Institute of Vietnamese Studies and Development Sciences], both at the Vietnam National University in Hà Nội, made it possible for my wife, Melinda, and me to stay several times in Vietnam to do research. Especially helpful were those two institutions' directors Phan Huy Lê, Vũ Minh Giang, Nguyễn Quang Ngọc, and Phạm Hồng Tung and office manager Đỗ Kiên. During our stays, Phan Huy Lê, Hoàng

Như Lan, Lê Văn Sinh, Đoàn Thiện Thuật, Trương Thị Hợp, Nguyễn Quang Ngọc, Đặng Vân Chi, and Nguyễn Văn Chính frequently assisted and entertained Melinda and me.

I sincerely thank numerous individuals, whose names should not be revealed, who shared with me their observations, experiences, and opinions about political and other issues in Vietnam.

At various times Nguyễn Điền in Canberra and Lê Văn Sinh in Hà Nội helped me to find relevant material. Also aiding me along the way were staff members at Menzies Library, Australian National University; Hamilton Library, University of Hawai'i; and Vietnam's National Library in Hà Nội.

For their comments on papers that evolved to become parts of this book, I thank Bùi Duyên, Anita Chan, Đặng Đình Trung, Kirsten Endres, Tom Fenton, Roger Haydon, Jason Morris-Jung, Pam Kelley, Ehito Kimura, Jonathan London, Ken MacLean, David Marr, Pam McElwee, Nguyễn Hồng Hải, Nguyễn Quang A, Nguyễn Văn Chính, David Rosenberg, Jim Scott, Drew Smith, Manfred Steger, Philip Taylor, Huong Le Thu, Angie Ngọc Trần, Trần Đình Lâm, Bill Turley, Tuong Vu, Jon Unger, Gwen Walker, and Brantly Womack. I am also indebted to Melinda Tria Kerkvliet, my wife and best friend, who commented on all chapters and was with me throughout the research journey from which this book emerged.

Also helping to improve my analysis were questions and suggestions received during presentations I made at a conference of the Denmark Association of Development Researchers in Copenhagen, May 2009; the Authoritarianism in East Asia conference organized by Jonathan London at City University of Hong Kong in June 2010; a colloquium convened by Shawn McHale at the Sigur Center for Asian Studies, George Washington University in October 2010; a forum organized by Lydia Yu-Jose at the Ateneo Center for Asian Studies, Ateneo de Manila University in November 2012; the Vietnam Update in November 2013 at the Australian National University; a forum arranged by Kirsten Endres at the Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology, Halle (Saale), Germany, in June 2015; a colloquium at the Center for Southeast Asian Studies, University of Hawai'i, in September 2015; a forum at the Asia Center, University of the Philippines that Ed Tadem convened in October 2015; and seminars at the Australian National University organized by the Department of Political and Social Change and the Vietnam Studies Group in November 2013 and October 2017.

I sincerely thank Roger Haydon at Cornell University Press for his encouragement and advice and for finding two scholars to read the entire manuscript. To both of those readers I am indebted for their numerous useful suggestions. One reader chose not to remain anonymous so I can thank Andrew Wells-Dang by name.

For helping to finalize the manuscript for this book, I thank Pam Kelley for suggesting a title; Quynh H. Vo for scrutinizing all endnotes; Ann Bone for her conscientious copyediting; and Quynh Chi Do, Nicholas Farrelly, Jill Jokisch, Ellen Murphy, Huong Nguyen, Calvin Tran, and Angie Ngọc Trần for advice about photos. For permission to use their photos, I am grateful to Đinh Văn Dũng, Getty Images, Nguyễn Đình Toán, OCI, Giang Vu Hoang Pham, and Ian Timberlake.
