

Contents

Acknowledgements	vi
Introduction: Reading practices and participation in digital and medieval media	1
Part I: Participatory discourse
1 Corrective reading: Geoffrey Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde and John Lydgate's Troy Book	27
2 Nonlinear reading: the Orcherd of Syon , Titus and Vespasian , and Lydgate's Siege of Thebes	62
Part II: Evoking participation
3 Reading materially: John Lydgate's 'Soteltes for the coronation banquet of Henry VI'	105
4 Reading architecturally: the wall texts of a Percy family manuscript and the Poulys Daunce of St Paul's Cathedral	128
5 Reading temporally: Thomas of Erceldoune's prophecy , Eleanor Hull's Commentary on the penitential Psalms , and Thomas Norton's Ordinal of alchemy	167
Conclusion: Nonreading in late-medieval England	193
Appendices	204
Bibliography	235
Index	256