I want to thank Irena Kowalik and Mateusz Kowalik, without whom this book would not have been possible. They provided me with materials and information that have been essential when writing about Tadeusz Kowalik. I would also like to thank Jan Toporowski and Paweł Kozłowski, whose expertise on this topic helped to guide me in my work. In particular, I am grateful to Grzegorz Konat, with whom I learnt much through our conversations. We also cooperated in researching Kowalik's archive at the Polish Academy of Sciences and jointly organised a conference on Tadeusz Kowalik's life and work in Warsaw on the tenth anniversary of his death.

I am indebted to all those who agreed to be interviewed about Kowalik's life and work. I would especially like to thank my colleague from Kozminski University, Witold Morawski, who has provided me with advice and encouragement throughout this project.

I am grateful to Manchester University Press for their help and support in the preparation and publication of this book. Radhika Desai has been a diligent and sometimes tough editor of this book, which is being published as part of the Geopolitical Economy series which she edits. Her comments and advice were invaluable, and she greatly improved the content and style of the book. I would also like to thank Alan Freeman for his help and advice. Of course, all errors and shortcomings of the book are my responsibility alone.

Finally, I would like to thank my daughter Bri Rae, who makes everything in my life worthwhile.
