

Acknowledgements

This project was only possible with the help of a community of scholars, colleagues, friends, and mentors who all helped me, in varying capacities, complete my work and get it to the quality and standard needed. First and foremost, thank you to Dr Alan Roughley (1952–2014) who gave me a chance to meet all these wonderful Burgess scholars all the way back in 2009, Dr Ben Forkner who gave me the initial idea for my doctoral work, Dr Jim Clarke who gave me the advice to pursue a PhD with my work before a book, and Dr Andrew Biswell for tirelessly working with me since 2014 to make this dream a reality and for vastly improving the quality of my work – this monograph owes its success to your guidance: thank you. Perhaps more importantly, depending on who you ask, thank you to my wife Julia Thurley, my daughter Sasha Rue Thurley, my son Leo Alexander Thurley, and my mother Terry Thurley for being the foundation that holds me up and supports me day in and day out – I LOVE YOU! Additionally, thank you to the Board of Trustees at the International Anthony Burgess Foundation (IABF) for trusting and supporting me through this journey, as well as the IABF staff who have assisted me with my research. Thanks to Gaston College for supporting me as a teacher and researcher. Special thanks to the early readers and commentators on my work who helped me as I started and continued researching and writing over the last decade: Rachel Brown, Yves Buelens, Dr Rob Spence, Dr Christine Gengaro, Aolani Gouge, Michele Domenech, Matthew Frost, and Dr Alan Shockley (1970–2020).
