

Contents

Editor's Foreword	vii
A Note on Transcription	xi
Introduction	1
1. The Dynamics of the Eurasian Steppe Ecology	8
2. Economic Developments in the Ponto-Caspian Steppe	18
The First Stage of the Food-Producing Economy	19
The Second Stage of the Food-Producing Economy	23
The Domestication and Early Use of the Horse	25
The Development of the Pit-Grave Cultural Community	32
The Spread of Wheeled Transport: A Prerequisite to the Opening of the Great Silk Road Routes	34
3. The Eurasian Steppe in the Bronze Age	39
Proto-Urban Culture in the Urals	40
The Chariots of the Eurasian Steppe	49
The Crisis of Complex Economy, the Development of Nomadism in the Eurasian Steppe, and the Origins of the Great Silk Road Routes	59
The Origin and Spread of the Bactrian Camel	66
4. Archaeological Cultures of Southern Central Asia	71
Southern Turkmenistan	71
The Lower and Middle Part of Transoxiana	76
Ferghana	78
Kirghizstan	82
5. Relations Between Eastern and Western Central Asia	88
Contacts of the Xinjiang People with the West in the Copper Age, and the Tocharian Question	88
Contacts of the Xinjiang People with the West in the Bronze Age	98

vi Contents

6. Conclusion 108

Appendix. Dating and Comparative Chronologies 115

Maps and Illustrations 129

Notes 203

Bibliography 207

Index 243