

CONTENTS

---

Series Editor's Foreword ROGER HOROWITZ	vii
Introduction REGINA LEE BLASZCZYK AND DAVID SUISMAN	i
PART I. FRAMING CAPITALISM AND THE SENSES
Chapter 1. "Use Not Perfumery to Flavor Soup": The Science of the Senses in Aesthetic Capitalism AI HISANO	19
Chapter 2. Chasing Flavor: Sensory Science and the Economy INGEMAR PETTERSSON	36
Chapter 3. Richer Sounds: Capitalism, Musical Instruments, and the Cold War Sonic Divide SVEN KUBE	53
PART II. RESISTING RATIONALIZATION
Chapter 4. Altered States and Gustatory Taste: The Sensory Synergies of Whiskey Marketing in the Mid-Twentieth-Century United States LISA JACOBSON	73

Chapter 5. The Psychophysics of Taste and Smell: From Experimental Science to Commercial Tool ANA MARÍA ULLOA	95
Chapter 6. Sky's the Limit: Capitalism, the Senses, and the Failure of Commercial Supersonic Aviation in the United States DAVID SUISMAN	111
Chapter 7. Sounding Maritime Metal: On Weathering Steel and Listening to Capitalism at Sea NICHOLAS ANDERMAN	128
PART III. PRODUCTION
Chapter 8. Making Human Trash Tasty: A History of Sweet Cattle Feed in the Progressive Era NICOLE WELK-JOERGER	145
Chapter 9. Getting a Handle on It: Thomas Lamb, Mass Production, and Touch in Design History GRACE LEES-MAFFEI	162
PART IV. MARKETPLACE
Chapter 10. Fragrance and Fair Women: Perfumers and Consumers in Modern London JESSICA P. CLARK	183
Chapter 11. Sold on Softness: DuPont Synthetics and Sensory Experience REGINA LEE BLASZCZYK	203
Chapter 12. Feminine Touches: The Sensory World of Lady Hilton MEGAN J. ELIAS	226
Notes	245
List of Contributors	287
Index	291