

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	v
----------------------------	---

Introduction
Research design and methodology in L2 studies of tense and aspect . .	1
Llorenç Comajoan and M. Rafael Salaberry

Part I. Theoretical representations of tense and aspect in L2 studies

Chapter 1
A Cognitive Grammar perspective on tense and aspect	11
Susanne Niemeier

Chapter 2
The Spanish preterite and imperfect from a cognitive point of view . .	57
Aintzane Doiz

Chapter 3
Frequency-based grammar and the acquisition of tense and aspect in L2 learning.	89
Nick Ellis

Chapter 4
Generative approaches to the L2 acquisition of temporal-aspectual-mood systems	119
Dalila Ayoun and Jason Rothman

Part II. Research design and methodology in L2 studies of tense and aspect

Chapter 5
Research design: A two-way predication system is better than a four-way approach	159
Paz González

Chapter 6
Research design: Operationalizing and testing hypotheses	187
M. Rafael Salaberry

Chapter 7
Research design: From text to task	219
Kathleen Bardovi-Harlig

Chapter 8
Defining and coding data: Lexical aspect in L2 studies	271
Yasuhiro Shirai
Chapter 9
Defining and coding data: Narrative discourse grounding in L2 studies	309
Llorenç Comajoan
Chapter 10
Data analysis: Quantitative approaches	357
Robert Bayley
Chapter 11
Data analysis: The qualitative analysis of actionality in learner language	391
Anna Giacalone-Ramat and Stefano Rastelli
Chapter 12
Integrating the analyses of tense and aspect across research and methodological frameworks	423
M. Rafael Salaberry, Llorenç Comajoan, and Paz González
Author biographies	451
Subject index	455