

Contents

Acknowledgements — v

List of maps, figures and tables — xii

List of abbreviations — xx

1 Introduction — 1

- 1.0 Introduction — 1
- 1.1 Chinese dialects — 2
- 1.2 Theoretical background — 4
- 1.3 Overview of the book — 20
- 1.4 Data of the present study — 23
- 1.5 Technical notes — 28

2 Directional verbs in modern Cantonese.

A typological perspective — 33

- 2.0 Introduction — 33
- 2.1 Previous works — 33
- 2.2 Characteristics of directional verbs — 45
 - 2.2.1 Expression of motion — 46
 - 2.2.2 Ability to take a locative object — 48
 - 2.2.3 Potential to form compound directional complements — 52
- 2.3 Directional verbs — 56
 - 2.3.1 Self-agentive motion events — 56
 - 2.3.2 Non-agentive motion events — 59
 - 2.3.3 Agentive motion events — 61
- 2.4 Simple directional complements — 66
 - 2.4.1 Self-agentive motion events — 66
 - 2.4.2 Non-agentive motion events — 69
 - 2.4.3 Agentive motion events — 71
- 2.5 Compound directional complements — 76
 - 2.5.1 Self-agentive motion events — 76
 - 2.5.2 Non-agentive motion events — 79
 - 2.5.3 Agentive motion events — 81
- 2.6 State change verbs — 87
- 2.7 Discussion — 94
 - 2.7.1 From verb framing to satellite framing — 94
 - 2.7.2 From satellite framing to compounding — 116
- 2.8 Summary — 134

3	Directional verbs in modern Chinese dialects.
	A synchronic perspective — 136
3.0	Introduction — 136
3.1	Previous works — 136
3.2	Lexical variations in directional verbs — 164
3.2.1	Forms expressing ‘to ascend’ — 166
3.2.2	Forms expressing ‘to descend’ — 166
3.2.3	Forms expressing ‘to enter’ — 167
3.2.4	Forms expressing ‘to return’ — 167
3.3	Directional verbs — 168
3.3.1	Self-agentive motion events — 168
3.3.2	Non-agentive motion events — 174
3.3.3	Agentive motion events — 177
3.4	Simple directional complements — 178
3.4.1	Self-agentive motion events — 178
3.4.2	Non-agentive motion events — 186
3.4.3	Agentive motion events — 192
3.5	Compound directional complements — 203
3.5.1	Self-agentive motion events — 203
3.5.2	Non-agentive motion events — 208
3.5.3	Agentive motion events — 213
3.6	Discussion — 220
3.6.1	Modern Chinese dialects and Talmy’s typology of motion events — 221
3.6.1.1	Self-agentive motion events — 221
3.6.1.2	Non-agentive motion events — 223
3.6.1.3	Agentive motion events — 224
3.6.2	Classification of modern Chinese dialects — 229
3.6.2.1	Classification of Mǐn — 237
3.6.2.1.1	Directional verbs in three Mǐn dialects — 238
3.6.2.1.1.1	Self-agentive motion events — 240
3.6.2.1.1.2	Agentive motion events — 242
3.6.2.1.2	Simple directional complements in three Mǐn dialects — 242
3.6.2.1.2.1	Self-agentive motion events — 242
3.6.2.1.2.2	Agentive motion events — 243
3.6.2.1.3	Compound directional complements in three Mǐn dialects — 245
3.6.2.1.3.1	Self-agentive motion events — 245
3.6.2.1.3.2	Agentive motion events — 246
3.6.2.2	Classification of Mandarin — 253
3.6.2.3	Classification of Hakka — 258
3.7	Summary — 263

4	Directional verbs in early Chinese dialects.
	A diachronic perspective — 265
4.0	Introduction — 265
4.1	Previous works — 265
4.2	Lexical variations in directional verbs — 272
4.2.1	Forms expressing ‘to descend’ — 274
4.2.2	Forms expressing ‘to enter’ — 275
4.2.3	Forms expressing ‘to return’ — 276
4.3	Directional verbs — 278
4.3.1	Self-agentive motion events — 279
4.3.2	Non-agentive motion events — 285
4.3.3	Agentive motion events — 289
4.4	Simple directional complements — 296
4.4.1	Self-agentive motion events — 297
4.4.2	Non-agentive motion events — 303
4.4.3	Agentive motion events — 309
4.5	Compound directional complements — 318
4.5.1	Self-agentive motion events — 318
4.5.2	Non-agentive motion events — 323
4.5.3	Agentive motion events — 325
4.6	Discussion — 336
4.6.1	Early Chinese dialects and Talmy’s typology of motion events — 336
4.6.1.1	Self-agentive motion events — 337
4.6.1.2	Non-agentive motion events — 338
4.6.1.3	Agentive motion events — 339
4.6.2	From verb framing to satellite framing — 341
4.6.3	From satellite framing to compounding — 355
4.7	Summary — 365
5	Conclusion — 367
	References — 373
	Appendix 1. Major chronological divisions of Chinese history — 387
	Appendix 2. Samples of early dialectal materials — 388
	Language index — 399
	Subject index — 401	